Interim Aid Given Full Priority by Senate GOP

All Other Business Of Special Session Being Held Back, Taft Announces

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Republican steering Committee yesterday ordered "complete priority" for interim-aid legislation for France, Italy and Austria, but reserved judgment on details of the program.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) announced all other measures, including the politically volatile Kansas City vote fraud resolution, will be held up to give the stopgap bill Senate right of way November 24.

The week's ban on intervening legislation will be handled by two three-day Senate recesses after the President presents interim aid and price recommendations to a joint session Monday, Taft said.

Hints Price Measures Second

Taft hinted at a next-in-line status for one or more price measures after two to three weeks of joint House and Senate hearings. He said the steering group did not wish to "exclude" other measures, but felt "those things for which the session is called" are due prior consideration.

He speculated that five possible lines of price action will be explored by his Joint Economic Committee, without committing himself to a specific price program: (1) Control of consumer credit, (2) allocation of materials, (3) continuation of rent control, (4) continuation of export controls and (5) whether more control over commodity exchanges is needed.

He said the price problem may be dealt with in separate bills, rather than a single omnibus measure, and he doubted all of them could be handled "before Christmas."

Not Bar, Necessarily

The Senate Republican policy chief said he agreed with President Truman that foreign aid spending should be paid currently out of taxes, but did not agree that this "necessarily bars tax reduction."

He said the whole subject of tax reduction should be considered "concurrently" with the long-range European recovery program, so the full cost of foreign spending can be taken into account.

A reporter asked if that meant tax reduction would wait until next March. Taft said it did not. He said most of the Marshall Plan data is available now. In any event,

Dulles Urges Control Over Ruhr Industry

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

International control of the coal mines and factories of the Ruhr was urged by John Foster Dulles yesterday as one of the essential first steps toward the recovery and peace of Europe.

Dulles, a leading Republican spokesman on foreign policy, appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to support immediate stopgap relief for Europe and also a long-term recovery program.

But he warned that American dollars for a "Marshall Plan" would be worse than wasted unless they helped to create a more unified western Europe.

The Senate committee wound up its week-long hearings on stopgap relief yesterday after hearing Dulles and Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.). On the House side, the Foreign Affairs Committee heard a procession of Republican witnesses, including Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.), who predicted that the Communists in Italy would attempt a seizure of power by force in the spring.

Bill Due by Thursday

Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) said his House committee hearings would end Tuesday, and a stopgap relief bill would be ready by Thursday or Friday.

Dulles made three main points

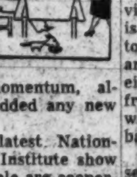
The Gallup Poll

Public Favors Voluntary Food Savings

By George Gallup
Director
American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 14.—The Government's voluntary food rationing program designed to save grain for Europe's hungry populations continues to have the active support of a majority of Americans.



Actually the program, headed by industrialist Charles Luckman, has lost little of the ground gained by its opening momentum, although it has not added any new participants.

Results of the latest Nationwide survey by the Institute show that 6 out of 10 people are cooperating with the committee's recommendation to eliminate meat from their menus one day a week.

The following question was asked first of a national cross-section of the population:

What about your own family—do you plan to follow the suggestion of meatless Tuesdays or will this be difficult for you to follow?

Plan to follow	38%
Already doing it	22
Too difficult	29
Don't know	11

That a voluntary program of this type lose some participants after the first flush of novelty has worn off is logically to be expected. For example, polls taken by the Institute during the 1946 voluntary food saving program revealed a small downward trend after the initial success. Subsequently, a continuing increase was noted in the number of people who said

Mrs. Lois Guerrieri, 32, Who Has 4 Children, Dazzled by Prospect of Plane Trip to London

By Charles Yarbrough
Post Reporter

There'll be a Washington Cinderella at Princess Elizabeth's afternoos party in St. Jame's Palace Tuesday.

She is attractive, brown-haired Mrs. Lois Guerrieri, 32-year-old mother of four children, who will whisk away from her modest brick duplex at 1724 S st. se., this morning, bound for New York and London.

A part-time seamstress because she likes to sew and because it supplements the family income, Mrs. Guerrieri made a green taffeta dress for Princess Elizabeth. She sent it to the Princess with a wish for royal happiness and God's guidance.

The thank-you reply, from the princess' first lady in waiting, was quick.

Then it was followed by the invitation—"The Lord Chamberlain is commanded by Their Majesties to invite Mrs. Louis Guerrieri to an afternoon party on Tuesday, the eighteenth of November, 1947, from 2:30 to 4:30." The princess will marry Lieut. Philip Mountbatten on Thursday.

Modest almost to the point of secrecy, Mrs. Guerrieri told only a few close friends and one of her dress-making customers.

When The Washington Post learned of it, she held out for two days before agreeing to a story of the honor which came to the little girl from North Carolina's hills near Marion who began making doll dresses when she was three.

She'll leave LaGuardia Field in New York by Trans World Airlines at 10 a. m. Sunday.

She is being sent by The Washington Post and will write a daily feature.

It was like the night before Christmas at the Guerrieri house last night. "If these gentlemen leave soon enough," she smiled at a reporter and photographer, "I'll sit down and whip up a dress to take along."

Still a little dazzled by the trip, which crystallized only at 6 p. m. yesterday, the feverish readying infected even the four children.

Her husband, Louis Guerrieri,

Two Railroad Brotherhoods Get Pay Hike

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Two railroad operating brotherhoods—one of which took part in the paralyzing railroad strike of May, 1946—reached an agreement today with the nation's railroads on a 15½ cents hourly wage boost.

The railroads estimated the raise, covering 200,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors, will hike their operating costs 100 million dollars annually.

The settlement came 14 days after the five operating brotherhoods demanded "immediate consideration" of their proposal for a 30 per cent wage increase, declaring that "further neglect and delay could disturb railroad operatings."

Other Negotiations Go On

Negotiations with three brotherhoods representing 150,000 other operating workers still are underway. On September 2 an arbitration board awarded the carriers' one million nonoperating workers a 15½ cents hourly increase which the roads estimated would cost them 438 million dollars annually.

A spokesman for the railroads said negotiations with the five operating brotherhoods were split, with the demands of the trainmen and conductors on wages and working rules being considered simultaneously because of their similarity.

The trainmen and conductors also agreed with the carriers on changes in four working rules and the number of rules changes demanded was trimmed from 44 to 15. Negotiations on the 11 rules changes pending—four proposed by the two unions and seven by the carriers—still are being negotiated.

No "Featherbedding"

John M. Fitzgerald, vice chairman of the Eastern Railway Presidents' Conference, said none of the 11 rules pending contained what the carriers regarded as "featherbedding" practices, requiring more men than needed for a job. He added that the rules changes being negotiated with the other three unions had been "narrowed considerably."

The four working rule agreements provided:

An earnings guarantee for certain classifications in yards service; an increase in differential for yard conductors or foremen; a reduction in the over-all time in short turn-around passenger service to eight hours' work within nine hours, and a provision that time paid for under the "hold-away-from-home" terminal will not be run off. Under the last rule, if a man is paid while away at another terminal, he won't have to operate trains for the time for which he is paid.

Argentina Offers U. S. Grain If Certain Conditions Are Met

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador James Bruce said today that Miguel Miranda, president of the National Economic Council had promised to sell Argentina's next grain crop at prevailing world prices, if the United States meets certain conditions.

The Ambassador said also that an agreement had been reached by the United States Army purchasing mission here to buy 28,500 tons of corn for Germany.

The announcement was made at a joint press conference by Ambassador Bruce and Col. Arnold Gilliam, chief of the Army mission here.

The condition posed by Miranda was that the United States, in exchange for the Argentine concession on grain prices, assure Argentina that it will be able to buy at market prices in the United States the transport equipment needed to move grain crops to the port.

Bruce said Miranda claimed Argentina recently was forced to pay, through middlemen, as high as 100 per cent above the market price for some materials.

Ambassador Bruce said he would forward Miranda's proposal to Washington with a recommendation that it be accepted.

Bruce said he was not certain as to how the details of the United States part of the deal would be worked out added that the embassy's main interest here was to get Argentina's grains moving toward Europe and that he enthusiastically supported any plan which would achieve that end.

He said Miranda wanted an arrangement whereby Argentina might pay the same prices for

Cripps Takes Tighter Grip On Economy

Succeeds Dalton As Treasury Head; Attlee Prepares for Opposition Attack

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, known to his countrymen as "the apostle of austerity," assumed almost complete control or Britain's entire economy today, succeeding Hugh Dalton as Chancellor of the Exchequer.

An informant close to Prime Minister Attlee said Cripps could be depicated to steer an orthodox economic course for this burdened nation which would be farther to the right than followed by Dalton.

Attlee's senior ministers met in emergency session during the day to prepare for a full-scale conservative onslaught stemming from Dalton's "grave indiscretion." Dalton relinquished the post at the head of the treasury after apologizing to the Commons for prematurely disclosing budget information to a newspaperman.

Follows Setback at Polls

As the ministers met, crowds milled outside the Prime Minister's residence at No. 10 Downing st. A high-ranking government source acknowledged that the Dalton incident was a "damaging blow" to the labor regime's prestige. The dropping of Dalton came less than two weeks after the Labor Party suffered a serious setback in municipal elections.

The London Star today editorially expressed its regrets that publication of the budget story in its columns led to Dalton's resignation, but made no apology for the publication. Later, the Star announced that its parliamentary correspondent, John Carvel, had been withdrawn from the Commons lobby at his own request in view of the proposal for a select committee inquiry.

While the gloom over the Dalton incident deepened in Downing st., one informant indicated that Dalton's departure would solve several problems of basic economic policy not only for the Prime Minister but also for Cripps.

Relationship Questioned

Since Cripps' appointment as Britain's minister of economic affairs September 29, delicate questions have arisen over his working relationship with Dalton, who has been the top man on fiscal policy, it was said.

Cripps had favored eliminating food subsidies in the latest autumn budget. But Dalton, backed by left-wing members of the cabinet, held out for continued payment of the 392 mililon pound ($1,568,000,000) contribution to keep British food prices down.

Additionally, the informant said, Cripps would have preferred "doing what he thought right" by drastically raising the tax on tobacco. But Dalton in his autumn budget attacked company profits this week as a source of revenue.

One source said that while the Dalton budget would not be altered, Cripps—who now has both the treasury and economic affairs posts—would draft the new budget fo rthe fiscal year beginning next April.

Editor Has Doubts

Ernest Eve, financial editor of the London Evening Standard, exficiently drastic measures to put persuade the cabinet to take "sufpressed doubt that Cripps could things right."

If he fails it may mean an early general election or devaluation of the pound, Eve said.

The National Coal Board, which runs Britain's nationalized coal mines, announced an agreement with the National Union of Mine Workers tonight for new minimum wage scales which it said would cost the government between 12 million and 13 million pounds (48 million and 52 million dollars) yearly.

Searchers Hunt For Man's Body In Crash of B-29

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 14 (AP).—Searchers today probed along a wreckage-strewn path for the missing body of one of the five men killed in the crash of a B-29 Superfortress on Mt. Spokane last night.

Two crew members miraculously survived when the tail section was torn off as the plane sheared through the trees atop the mountain in a severe snowstorm.

The Superfort roared into the snow-swept mountain at an estimated 230 miles an hour and burst into flames as it sheared a swath a quarter-mile long through the timber.

Three deputy sheriffs received severe facial burns when part of the burning ship exploded two hours after the crash.

De Ridder, La., Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Tornadic winds today struck the business section of this southwestern Louisiana town, ripped oil installations in nearby east Texas and injured at least 23 persons, 3 of them seriously.

Bob Adams of the De Ridder Enterprise said the storm lasted about six or seven minutes. The twister struck the business district but did its heaviest damage in the residential section.

Duty of Investigating Meyers Was AAF's, Justice Dept. Declares

Probers Told Only Army Could Act; Aviation Stock Deals Pictured

Post Reporter

The Justice Department yesterday flatly pinned on the Army Air Forces the full responsibility for a wartime "cover up" of charges that Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers was using his high AAF procurement office to make "immense profits" during the war.

Isaiah Matlack, chief of the war frauds unit, criminal division, Department of Justice, told the Senate War Investigating Committee that under the terms of a wartime agreement among Government agencies only Army authorities could have directed an investigation into charges against military personnel.

There were several developments yesterday in the individual case of Meyers, pictured in the hearings as a high-living poker-playing officer who speculated in war bonds and sought side deals of his own with war contractors, while he bought planes and equipment for the fighting front.

Asked Court-Martial

1. Meyers dramatically announced to a press conference that he had asked the Air Force "verbally" for a "court-martial" two months ago so that there could be a "fair hearing" on both sides of charges the Senate committee was beginning to make public.

2. The Army and the Air Force washed their hands of that suggestion immediately. The Air Force said Meyers had made such a verbal request and was refused, first because the matter was before the Congress, and second because the Air Force does not have jurisdiction since its establishment as a separate department. Meyers, retired on a $461 monthly pension, was an Army Air Force officer.

2. The Army said Meyers had made no such request of the Army but would be turned down if he did. An Army spokesman said that in any event an officer cannot request a court-martial. He can ask for a court of inquiry, which may or may not result in court-martial charges. Even if requested, the Army said, it will not act before the committee makes its recommendations.

Asked if Army officers did not receive lighter sentences from courts-martial than from civil courts, a spokesmen said that certainly appeared to be the case.

3. The Justice Department acknowledged it is investigating Meyers' activities. With the war over, the department now has jurisdiction.

Didn't Know of Meyers' Interest

4. Lawrence D. Bell, president of Bell Aircraft Co., testified that Meyers had suggested that he place some of his subcontracts for the United States Government with a Dayton, Ohio, firm, operated by "some friends" of the general. Bell said, under questioning, he did not know Meyers had a personal financial interest in the concern. Bell said his company placed 14 contracts totaling $1,053,573 with the company—Aviation Electric Co., first located in Dayton, Ohio, where Meyers was stationed as a procurement officer.

5. Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, now retired, Meyers' AAF superior, testified that in 1940 he had "more than suggested" to Meyers he dispose of any holdings in this company or get out of Air Forces procurement. He said he thought at the time Meyers had, although he didn't check. Under questions submitted by Meyers, he said he did not recall the general had said it would take him some time to get out of the company.

Had No Suspicion

6. Echols said he had "no suspicion whatever" that Meyers was holding aviation stocks while he was serving as a procurement officer until he heard of committee testimony that the general held better than $35,000 in such stocks in seven aircraft companies. It was against the announced policy of Gen. H. H. Arnold, wartime commander, Echols said.

7. Echols told the committee he knew that Meyers was speculating in Government war bonds while he was an AAF procurement officer. Testimony from Meyers is

Mobs Wreck Offices Of Rightist Party In Verona, Palermo

Rome, Nov. 14 (AP).—Sixteen persons were reported injured today in attacks upon rightist party headquarters by mobs of 5000 in Verona and 2000 in Palermo, Italy. Demonstrations passed off peaceably in Milan and Florence.

The Ministry of the Interior said that in Verona 10 were hurt when 5000 demonstrators wrecked headquarters of the Italian Social Movement and the Common Man Movement, both of which the Communists have branded "Fascist."

Il Giornale d'Italia, Rome newspaper, said five workmen and one carabinier were wounded slightly in Palermo, where about 2000 workers deserted the Navy shipyards to wreck three political offices.

The workers, shouting slogans against "the Fascists of Lombardy and Sicily," forced their way into the buildings, smashed furniture and windows and dumped furnishings into the streets.

In Florence, police headed off a procession of about 1000 marching on Common Man headquarters.

In Milan, the Italian news agency ANSA said, an automobile load of men dressed as laborers entered an office of the Liberal (Rightist) Party, stationed guards, made an unsuccessful search for members of the Italian Social Movement, and finally left.

Tension Heightened When Firing Rips Reds' Headquarters

Marseille, France, Nov. 14 (AP).—A spreading strike kept nerves taut in this turbulent port tonight. A police spokesman said the city was in a state of armed alert for "we just don't know what is going to happen."

A burst of arms fire riddled Communist headquarters, heightening the tension. The police prefecture estimated that 70,000 persons were on strike in a Communist-led protest against actions of the De Gaulist city administration.

About 40,000 Communists and their followers paraded at a funeral demonstration for one of their number killed in an attack on a bar after rioting flared in the city hall and caused injury of 50 persons.

Newspapers estimated that 7000 mobile guardsmen were standing by in event of trouble, but police said this figure was "exaggerated." Algerian infantrymen, republican security companies (national guard) and planes and armored units were known to be in readiness.

Plans for a general strike were dropped as the French government moved determinedly to prevent any new riots.

There were no casualties in the attack on Communist headquarters.

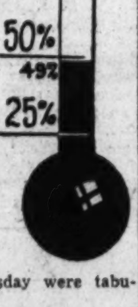
$1,913,712 Total Announced at Third Report Luncheon

The Community Chest Federation campaign hit 49.07 per cent of its $3,900,000 goal yesterday.



The figure, which put total intake to date at $1,913,712, was announced at the drive's third progress report luncheon, held at the Unietd State Chamber of Commerce.

Edward J. Keyes, executive director of the Chest, pointed out that by the third report session last year only 23 per cent of the goal had been obtained. Additional contributions since Thursday were tabulated at $68,438.

Labor's participation in the week-old campaign was stressed at the report session. Dozens of union leaders—from AFL, CIO and independent bodies—were on hand to emphasize the important part the working men and women are playing in the current drive.

Clement F. Preller, president of the Ceneral Labor Union, made clear that "organized labor" is wholeheartedly supporting the Community Chest campaign." He said, "Labor believes that what is good for the country is good for labor." He promised "increasing cooperation" for the future.

Preller said that in the past the working people of Washington, "while the principal supporters of the Chest, have not had sufficient voice in the policy-making deci-

Wounded Youth Is Believed to Be Gurion's Nephew

Jerusalem, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—One Jew was killed and a Jewish youth was wounded tonight in a gang-style machine-gun attack which apparently was a continuation of underground warfare in which 10 Britons have been killed and 32 wounded in the last three days.

The two Jews fell under a hail of bullets reportedly fired from a speeding taxi.

The dead man was not identified, but it was believed the wounded youth was Emanuel Ben-Gurion, nephew of Jewish Agency Chairman David Ben-Gurion.

Earlier today, four Britons—two soldiers in Tel Aviv and two constables in Jerusalem—were killed in daylight attacks by Jewish underground assassins.

The two soldiers were killed by machine-gun fire from a narrow alley as they walked through the center of the Tel Aviv business district at midday.

Four hours later the two constables, both in civilian clothing, were shot down by fire from a window of a five-story building as they left the Mustapha police station in Jerusalem.

One Dies Instantly

One constable was killed instantly. The other, mortally wounded, drew his gun as he fell and attempted to shoot back. His bullet hit a 4-year-old girl playing in the street. It was not known how seriously she was wounded. The constable died less than 10 minutes later.

Jerusalem was ordered out of bounds to all British troops not on duty. Military police herded strolling Tommies into trucks and sent them to Allenby Barracks.

Truman Forbids 'Witch Hunts' In U. S. Agency Loyalty Check

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday assured Government employes they need fear no "witch hunts" or "kangaroo courts" in application of his order to clean up the Federal service of subversive elements.

In a statement inaugurating work of the 20-member Loyalty Review Board appointed last week, Mr. Truman emphasized that fairness must prevail in dealing with employes under the order.

"I do not want them to fear they are objects of any 'witch hunt,'" he said of the "overwhelming majority" of loyal employes. "They are not being spied upon; they are not being restricted in their activities. They have nothing to fear from the loyalty program, since every effort has been made to guarantee full protection to those who are suspected of disloyalty.

"Rumor, gossip, or suspicion will not be sufficient to lead to the dismissal of an employe for disloyalty."

In one sentence of his 1000-word statement, the President referred to cases similar to that in which seven employes dismissed by the State Department have demanded a hearing or the right to resign. Both have been refused.

"Accordingly," the President said, after pointing out the "stigma" attached to removal for disloyalty, "I have ordered the agencies of the Government, except where a few agencies find it necessary to exercise extraordinary powers granted to them by the that the most he ever had was $4,000,000 worth. Echols testified Meyers told him about the bond transaction but he couldn't understand it.

His testimony flatly contradicted that of Maj. Gen. Junius W. (Jingling) Jones, air inspector, who had told the committee the day before that the Army or the Army Air Forces had made no investigation because the matter was before the Justice Department's criminal division.

Not Aware of Agreement

Jones, who has been under hot committee fire for two days, testified several times that he was not "aware" of any wartime agreement that the military services had sole responsibility for investigation of their own personnel.

The dapper general had also tried to shrug off the charges because they had been contained in what he termed an anonymous "crack-pot letter."

With a brief smile, Matlack told the committee he did not regard the letter, which was forwarded to the Air Forces by the FBI, as the work of a "crack-pot."

The charges in the letter were that Meyers was using his office as second ranking procurement officer to buy stocks of aviation companies as soon as bids were submitted to the Army Air Forces and before they were made public. The writer, who said he worked for the Air Forces, said Meyers was worth some one or two million dollars as the result of such transaction.

Subcommittee Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), who has been hurling words like "cover-up," "whitewash," "concealment," at Jones, asked Matlack if the criminal division would have investigated these charges on the strength of the letter had the responsibility been theirs.

"Unquestionably, yes. There's no doubt about that," replied Matlack.

Later Jones came back to the stand, after a brief consultation with the committee, and volunteered the information that it was "quite a puzzle" about how that letter had been handled anyway.

Apparently he said it had not gone to his office first but direct to Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, commanding general of the Air Forces. He was in the Pacific at the time. Jones said, and no one in his office now knew why it had gone outside regular channels.

Wound Up Merely "Filed"

It wound up merely "filed" with the initials of Col. Jacob Smart, then executive officer to General Arnold.

But Jones said he had talked to Colonel Smart early this year and Smart could not remember anything at all about it. Jones wasn't sure, apparently, that the initials actually were made by Smart.

Jones concluded his testimony by saying that "it is safe to assume" the Air Force will make some changes in their method of handling investigations.

'Feeble-Minded Teenagers' Blamed For Crime Wave

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—Police mulling over a wave of vandalism, arson and assorted "pranks" got an answer today from Judge Charles C. Moylan, who put the finger on "feeble-minded teenagers."

Citing a year-long history of willful property damage, climaxed in the extensive desecration of a synagogue a few weeks ago, the judge declared:

"In a large proportion of cases of this type the youngsters, or at least the ringleaders, turn out to be feeble-minded.

"Many of them are classified as morons."

He expounded his theory as he committed a 12-year-old lad to Crownsville State School for the Feeble-Minded.

The boy had stolen articles from parked cars, then punctured the tires with a pocketknife.

Police today wound up an investigation of four fires they reported were set in public school No. 6 in the past week. Two pupils, a boy of 10 and a boy of 12, are slated for Juvenile Court action.

10 Prisoners Flee Lime Plant At Staunton, Va.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—Ten long-term prisoners escaped from the State lime plant at Staunton late last night and six of them were believed to be in the vicinity of Richmond, prison officials disclosed today.

W. Frank Smyth, superintendent of the State penitentiary, said an investigation had been launched into the circumstances surrounding the getaway of the 10 men, four of whom were recaptured within a few hours by Charlottesville police. Prison officials said there were 22 men in the dormitory and 12 stayed behind.

The theory that the six convicts who remain at large were heading toward Richmond was strengthened by the recovery of a stolen automobile, about 12 miles west of Richmond.

Smyth said the convicts escaped by sawing in half the steel bars of their dormitory cell window.

Fairfax Child Service Increases Consulting Staff

Fairfax County Child Consultation Service, 1057 W. Broad st., Falls Church, recently has added four new staff members, bringing its total organization to six.

Mrs. Harriet M. Stanton, graduate of Wellesley and Columbia, will serve as a psychologist. She previously has worked with the Danvers, Mass., State Hospital and the New York State Psychiatric Institute and Hospital.

Miss Lillian M. Snyder is the new psychiatric social worker. She is a graduate of the University of Illinois and the Smith College School of Social Work. She has had experience in Chicago, St. Louis, Galveston, Tex., and New York. During the war she was overseas with the American Red Cross for two years.

Two new secretaries, Mrs. Regina Hall and Mrs. Vera Moody, both of Falls Church, also have been appointed.

Rep. Fisher Urges Unrestricted Peanut Production

By The Associated Press

Unrestricted production of peanuts in 1948 was proposed yesterday by Representative Fisher (D., Tex.), who urged Secretary of Agriculture Anderson to cancel plans for a quota referendum among growers.

Scheduled for December 9, the referendum would determine whether producers approve an acreage allotment program under which Government price guarantees and loans would continue.

Fisher wrote Anderson that in view of the current world food shortage and pending foreign relief program there should be no curtailment of production.

The Agriculture Department estimates that adoption of the quota system will effect about a 25 per cent cut in the national acreage, as compared with the three-million-acre average for the past five years, when no restriction was imposed.

Two thirds of the farmers voting in the referendum must approve the quota plan to put it into effect.

O'Conor-Markey Recount Ruling Expected Monday

By The Associated Press

A three-man Senate subcommittee investigating the O'Conor-Markey Maryland senatorial contest will meet at 10 a.m. Monday to rule on the validity of 20,000 ballots—the irreducible minimum upon which counsel for the two contestants cannot agree.

Senator O'Conor has been given an unofficial margin of 1806 votes over D. John Markey of Frederick in last year's contested senatorial election.

Before Markey contested the election, O'Conor had an official lead of 2232 votes, but unofficial results of a recount of the machine vote in Baltimore City and Montgomery County whittled it to 1806.

The final ruling of the subcommittee will be turned over to the Senate Rules Committee, which will put its findings to a vote before the entire Senate.

Va. Ocean Front Project Costing Million Planned

Virginia Beach, Va., Nov. 14 (AP). Plans for a one-million-dollar improvement program adjacent to Seaside Park at Virginia Beach were revealed in the blueprint stage or further advanced, along with a projected shopping center fronting 140 feet of Atlantic blvd. and 138 feet on 31st st.

The improvements are being undertaken by Charles and Art Lewis, both prominent in the outdoor amusement field, who acquired the property in disposing of their interests in Seaside Park to Dudley Cooper and the latter's associates.

Charles Lewis said that one stage of the project, the erection of 45 apartments on the ocean front, between 33d and 34th sts., will be under construction in about 10 days.

The 60 remaining apartments are scheduled for erection on 30th st and extending between Atlantic and Pacific blvds.

Overcrowding at VPI Seen as Continuing

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 14.—Chancellor John R. Hutcheson of Virginia Polytechnic Institute told the V. P. I. Alumni Association last night there is no immediate end in sight for overcrowded conditions at the school. He discussed plans for relieving the situation and said the school must plan for a future enrollment of 5000. He was heard by alumni from Fredericksburg, the counties of Spotsylvania, Stafford, King George and Caroline, and high school principals from the counties.

Congress, to give hearings to persons who are charged with disloyalty."

The seven State Department employes were discharged for "indirect association with representatives of a foreign power" without a hearing. The current State Department Appropriation Act provides that the Secretary "in his discretion" might discharge any employe before last June 30 if he thought such action "necessary or advisable."

Concedes They're Not Affected

Thurmond Arnold of Arnold, Fortas and Porter, counsel for the seven, conceded last night that his clients were not affected by the President's order. He insisted, however, that they should be permitted to resign to avoid being "hounded for the rest of their lives."

The Loyalty Review Board, of which former Assistant U. S. Attorney General Seth W. Richardson is chairman, conferred with Mr. Truman shortly before he issued the statement. Members of the board then were guests of Attorney General Clark at lunch.

Richardson said the first meetings would be devoted to "getting acquainted" and deciding questions of procedure.

Believes People Behind Him

Mr. Truman made it clear that he believed the people of the Nation were behind him in his determination to remove "disloyal and subversive elements" from Government employ. But he made it equally clear that:

"We must not, however, permit employes of the Federal Government to be labeled as disloyal or potentially disloyal to their Government when no valid basis exists for arriving at such a conclusion."

He said membership in or association with organizations designated by the Attorney General as "totalitarian, Fascist, Communist or subversive" would not be grounds for automatic dismissal. This provision in his original order, he observed had been "interpreted by some" as establishing an absolute standard.

"Membership in an organization," he declared yesterday, "is simply one piece of evidence which may or may not be helpful in arriving at a conclusion as to the action which is to be taken in a particular case."

Outlines Machinery

Mr. Truman outlined step by step the machinery for enforcing his order. These were the steps he indicated:

1. "Any person suspected of disloyalty must be served with a written notice of the charges against him in sufficient detail to enable him to prepare his defense. In some unusual situations security considerations may not allow full disclosure."

2. Hearings will be given to employes charged with disloyalty, before loyalty boards set up in each agency.

3. Hearings before these boards will give the employe every opportunity to present his defense and he may be accompanied by counsel or a representative of his own choosing.

4. The employe may appeal the finding of the loyalty board to the head of the department, who can approve or disapprove the board's recommendations.

5. If the department head concurs in dismissal, the employe may appeal to the Loyalty Review Board of the Civil Service Commission, which began operations yesterday.

The President said he was "looking to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the conduct of all loyalty investigations" made necessary by his order.

Interim Aid Gets No. 1 Spot

he said tax action must originaate in the House.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), ending a conference next week with his own GOP steering committee, has already indicated any House action on a tax bill will b taken in the regular session, probably early in January.

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) briefed the steering group on foreign aid legislation and promised delivery of an interim bill to the Senate by November 24.

Not Single Objection Raised

Taft said not a single objection was raised to sending food and fuel to Italy, France and Austria to help them get through the winter, but made no effort to reach conclusions on amounts.

"Everybody agreed there should be a temporary program," he said.

He added that the steering group was not informed when the long-range recovery program will be submitted by the President, "but we understand we will not get it Monday." He said he favored consideration of the Marshall recovery program following action on interim aid, but once again criticized the Administration's over-all estimates.

Taft told reporters he had "no particular opinion on the interim aid figure but thought Secretary of State Marshall's total for long and short range program was "too high a rate of export."

"He's discussing a seven-billion-a-year program."

Taft is urging a 4½-billion "rate" which approximates current foreign outlays.

'Pickled' B-29s to Strengthen Air Force

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

America's long range bomber strength will be nearly doubled by putting some 250 stored B-29s back into active service this winter, Air Force officials said yesterday.

An announcement revealed that 650 "pickled" bombers and fighters now are being withdrawn from storage to build the Air Force to its full authorized strength by December 31.

The action is expected to give the United States an active Air Force—with crews—of from 500 to 600 strategic bombers and 3500 or more other craft.

But should America suddenly be thrust into war, this force would last only a few days in combat, Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington declared.

Symington declared in an address to Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity that demobilization of the Air Force has brought it to a state where it would be adequate for only a short time in case of a sudden war. Losses and dispersion of strength require large reserves of planes and trained men, he said.

His address coincided with an announcement that 250 B-29s and 400 P-47 and P-51 fighters are being put back in service. By December 31, it was said, we will have 55 groups fully manned with planes and crews.

The Air Force would not reveal the present number of B-29s in service, nor the exact number of bomber groups or planes which will be in service when the 55 group program is complete.

It was disclosed in August, however, that we had eight long-range bomber groups, not all of which had their full strength of 30 B-29s. Back in May, Gen. George C. Kenney's Strategic Air Command staged a mock bombing raid on Washington, in which about 125 B-29s took part—almost all that could be put in the air, Kenney said.

About 130 B-29s being pulled out of storage will be assigned to Strategic Air Command bomber groups based at Fort Worth, Tex.; Tucson, Ariz.; Roswell, N. Mex.; Salina, Kans.; Rapid City, S. Dak.; MacDill Field, Fla.; Spokane, Wash.; Merced, Calif. and Presque Isle, Me., yesterday's announcement said. This will bring these groups to full strength.

The others will go to reconnaissance, weather, test and rescue units or to the Far Eastern Air Force.

New, longer range bombers—B-50s and B-36s—are not expected to join combat groups until later next year. Until then the B-29, recently redesignated a "medium" bomber, will remain the Air Force's strategic weapon.

Along with the Thunderbolts and Mustangs being hauled out of storage to build Strategic Air Command and Tactical Air Command fighter groups to full 75-plane strength, some jet fighters are coming off the production line.

Units at Andrews Field, Md., and Selfridge Field, Mich., will get modernized P-80B Shooting Stars. An Air Defense Command unit at Dow Field, Me., will get P-84 Thunderjets.

Besides the 4000-odd planes which will make up the active Air Force, there will be some 10,000 craft of all types still in storage.

Hungarian Conditions Described by Pfeiffer

Korean Plan Wins Despite Russians

Commission Voted By U. N. in Face of Bitter Red Attack

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, N. Y., Nov. 14.—A commission to help Koreans attain independence won final approval today from the United Nations General Assembly despite vehement objections by Russia.

The American proposal was approved by 43 nations. Six others abstained. The entire Soviet bloc, led by Dmitri Z. Manuilsky of the Ukraine, boycotted the election and refused to participate in the commission work. Delegates felt certain it would be barred from the Soviet zone of Korea.

A Soviet proposal for withdrawal of American and Russian troops by January 1 was defeated 34 to 7, with 16 nations abstaining. The American resolution would have troops withdrawn after establishment of an independent government for all of Korea.

Russian Points Insults

Manuilsky was in his best form as he pointed insults toward eight non-Soviet nations which have been named to the commission.

As for the United States, which is not a member, the former head of the Communist International accused it of attempting "to foment disorder everywhere that it hopes to infiltrate."

He singled out Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the new French rightist party, the Rally of the French People, as a "warmonger." It was the first time at this session of the Assembly a Soviet delegate attacked De Gaulle, who this week proposed an anti-Communist economic bloc.

De Gaulle "Warmonger"

"Why is it that this warmonger has not yet had his wrist slapped in France?" Manuilsky asked.

Canada also lacks objectivity in her feelings against the Soviets, he declared, because last year "an anti-Soviet plot was hatched in Canada and unbridled agitation was used; this was shameful for Canada."

Delegates guessed he was objecting to Canada's disclosure of a Soviet espionage ring which tried to find atom secrets.

Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippines, said Manuilsky, "looks at the world and at international relations through rose-colored glasses purchased in an American optometry store."

'Young Imperialism'

Australia, he said, pointing to Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, Australian delegate, has given birth to a "young imperialism" which "threatens not only Korea but a whole series of other Pacific Ocean countries and colonies which are now in colonial or semicolonial subjugation."

El Salvador, he insisted, "never voted against the United States."

The commission is to act at the birth of Korean independence. It is to observe free elections in both the southern zone, where American troops control two thirds of the Korean population and most of the farm land, and in the Soviet-dominated northern zone, where most of the industry is concentrated.

150 Women Died

Nazi Firm's Fatal Drug Tests Bared

Nuernberg, Germany, Nov. 14 (AP).—The I. G. Farben combine purchased 150 women from the Oswiecim concentration camp after complaining about a price of 200 reichsmarks each, and killed all of them in experiments with a soporific drug, a French witness testified today.

The witness was Gregoire M. Afrine. He told the United States Military Tribunal trying 23 Farben directors on war crime charges he was employed as an interpreter by the Russians after they overran the Oswiecim camp in January, 1945, and had found a number of letters there.

Among the letters, he said, were some addressed from Farben's "Bayer" plant to the Nazi commandant of the camp. These excerpts were offered in evidence:

1. "In contemplation of experiments of a new soporific drug, we would appreciate your procuring for us a number of women."
2. "We received your answer but consider the price of 200 marks per woman excessive. (The mark was worth 40 cents at the prewar rate). We propose to pay not more than 170 marks per head. If agreeable, we will take possession of the women. We need approximately 150."
3. "We acknowledge your accord. Prepare for us 150 women in the best possible health conditions and as soon as you advise us you are ready, we will take charge of them."
4. "Received the order of 150 women. Despite their emaciated condition, they were found satisfactory. We shall keep you posted on developments concerning this experiment."
5. "The tests were made. All subjects died. We shall contact you shortly on the subject of a new load."

Truce Reached In Scrap Over 'Dying' Ship

Newark, N. J., Nov. 14 (AP).—Newark city officials and counsel for the salvage firm which purchased the decommissioned battleship New Mexico reached a truce late today and postponed the "Battle of Newark" at least until Sunday.

The truce provides that the city will delay its arguments for a Federal Court injunction if no effort is made to move the onetime queen of the Pacific Fleet up the Newark Channel tomorrow, thus providing moral reinforcements to Newark's two-fireboat navy.

U. S. District Court Judge Thomas F. Meaney had set 11:30 a. m. tomorrow for hearing of arguments on an application filed by the city for an injunction to restrain Lipsett, Inc., from having the New Mexico towed to Port Newark for scrapping.

Although the city has agreed to delay presenting its arguments it is not withdrawing the injunction application, pending a final agreement, Deputy Mayor Barney Koplin said.

The New Mexico, scheduled to arrive at the channel this morning, missed the tide.

Newark has announced it does not want its Port Newark turned into a scrapyard for old warships, contending such a situation would jeopardize its 70-million-dollar Port of New York Authority development program for the city's airport and seaport.

When asked how the injunction—if granted—could be served, Mayor Vincent J. Murphy suggested that it might be necessary to meet the invading New Mexico as she enters Newark Bay and serve it on the captain of the ship's tugboat convoy.

Bridegroom Dies Of Burns 8 Hours After Marriage

Philadelphia, Nov. 14 (AP).—A 34-year-old bridegroom burned to death today eight hours after his marriage while his bride was making frantic efforts to rescue him using an open umbrella as a shield against the flames.

John Miller died on the third floor of a North Philadelphia apartment house. His bride, Rose, 34, was revived at St. Joseph's Hospital after she fled, hysterical and near collapse, seeking help.

Mrs. Miller told authorities the fire started when her husband, a pipefitter, dozed off with a lighted cigarette.

Indian Planes Aid Pocketed Garrisons

Srinagar, Kashmir, India, Nov. 14 (AP).—An Indian military spokesman said today that strafing planes of the Royal Indian Airforce were supporting garrisons of Kashmir state troops pocketed by Moslem invaders from Pakistan in the hilly regions south of Srinagar.

He quoted unconfirmed reports that 30,000 persons had been killed in the withdrawal of one garrison from positions near the Pakistan border in the south. Other garrisons in the area were reported to have been annihilated.

Meanwhile, Indian troops have pushed raiders who attacked from Pakistan's northwest frontier province farther westward from the Valley of Kashmir, the spokesman said.

Ceylon Formally Made Independent Nation

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Ceylon formally changed its status from a colony to a self-governing partner in the British Commonwealth today, and the measure granting independence to Burma passed the Commons.

A government white paper said an agreement between Britain and Ceylon granted the Indian Ocean island off India's east coast full and unrestricted rights of self-administration. Britain may station land, sea and air forces on the island by mutual agreement, and agreed to train Ceylonese armed forces. The British promised to support any request by Ceylon for membership in the United Nations.

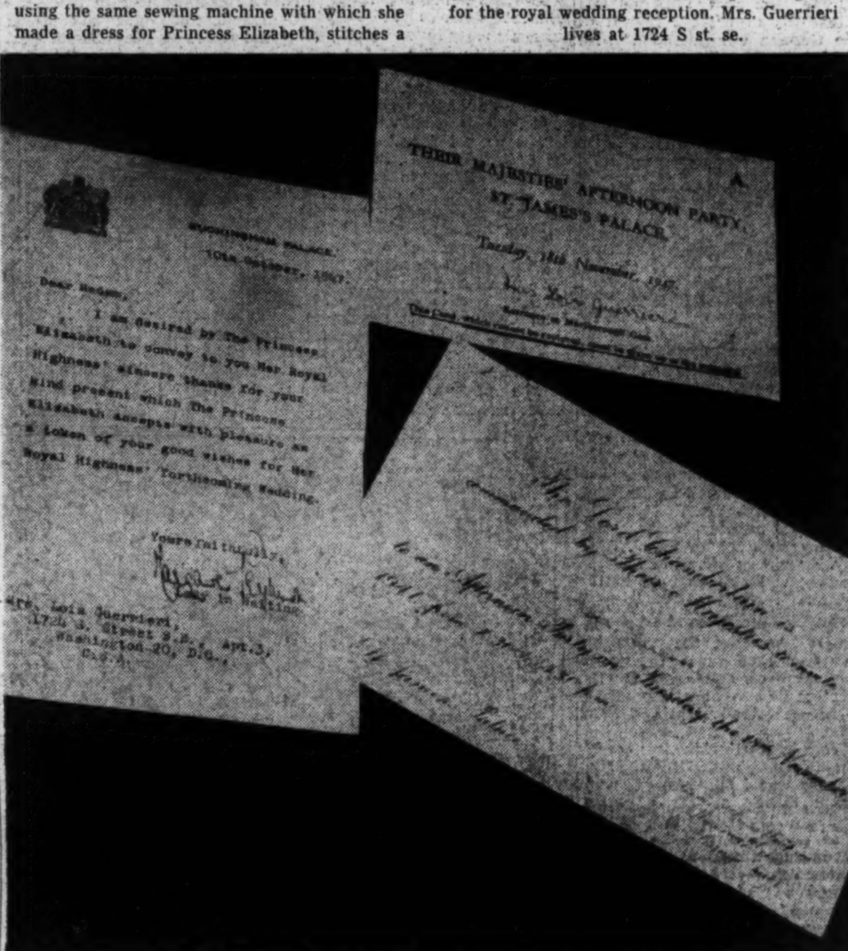
Making a Suit to Wear to England...

STITCHING IN TIME—Mrs. Louise Guerrieri, using the same sewing machine with which she made a dress for Princess Elizabeth, stitches a gabardine suit to wear on her trip to England for the royal wedding reception. Mrs. Guerrieri lives at 1724 S st. se.



10th October, 1947.

Dear Madam,

I am desired by The Princess Elizabeth to convey to you Her Royal Highness' sincere thanks for your kind present which The Princess Elizabeth accepts with pleasure as a token of your good wishes for Her Royal Highness' forthcoming wedding.

Yours faithfully,

OFFICIAL MISSIVES—Here is the letter of invitation (left), admittance card and invitation to attend Princess Elizabeth's wedding reception, received by Mrs. Louise Guerrieri

Elizabeth's Edict on Stockings Breaks Tradition

London, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth shattered royal tradition today by declining to wear white stockings for her wedding to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten Thursday.

Instead, she will wear a pair dyed a special neutral shade—and they will be so constructed that they will not "ladder" when she kneels during the Westminster Abbey ceremony.

[Princess Elizabeth's wedding cake was described by a New York Herald Tribune correspondent as being nine feet high, weighing 500 pounds and having five and a half pints of liquor in it.

[The cake, displayed to newspapermen, is of classical Greek design with four tiers, each with decorative sugar work designed to emphasize important factors in the life of the royal couple.]

The original austerity program received a further setback today. Not only will the Household Cavalry wear its gorgeous full dress uniforms for the occasion, but the decorations along the procession route from Buckingham Palace will be in keeping with a royal function. Originally there were to be none. The authorities reluctantly decided to put up $40,000 worth but today it was estimated they would cost $60,000.

Further, the town authorities of Windsor, where the King has a castle outside London—and the princess will have a suite after the honeymoon—voted to let public houses remain open until the unprecedented hour of midnight on the wedding day. Usually the pubs close at 10:30 p. m.

Scotland Yard neared completion of its plans to safeguard visiting royalties. The yard announced that it did not believe that any terrorists could break through the guard which will be posted at ports and airports. Westminster Abbey will be virtually sealed for 24 hours before the wedding, under heavy guard. Some parts of the abbey will be closed to the public for four days previously, and detectives will search every corner as successive areas are closed off.

Party Guest Of Princess

42-year-old specifications writer with the District engineering department, stalked the house like a man in a dream; smilingly pleased, yet fretful that "she will not be well cared for" on the trip.

"You'll get home as soon as possible?" he asked.

He'll take annual leave from his job for the eight days she'll be gone to help care for the children, three of whom are in school. He'll have help from her sister-in-law, Mrs. Rosalie Smith, of 2018 14th st. se.

The oldest child, Richard Paul, 12, could hardly blieve his mother's good fortune. He nervously practiced on the piano, then paced the one bedroom apartment while pictures were being made.

The others, Cormella Lois, 8, Lois Marie, 6 and Mary Ann, 5, were on exemplary behavior, not quite realizing the reason for all the hustle and bustle.

Mrs. Guerrieri, who sews "after I get the children off to school and get the housework done," had the dress-making-for-the-Princess" in a sort of a flash one day.

"I read that clothing was being curtailed in England and that Her Highness' wedding would not be elaborate.

"I had this green taffeta material to make a dress for myself," she said. "Then I made up my mind—I'll send it to the Princess."

She spent spare time on it for about three weeks. "It was simply made—a simple design; full skirt, full leg-o-mutton sleeves and a close, round collar. And it's the "new length" too, she smiled.

Then she mailed it with a short note. The dress was insured for $50. "But to me it was priceless."

Came the thank-you note. "I am desired by the Princess Elizabeth to convey her Royal Highness' sincere thanks for your kind present which the Princess Elizabeth accepts with pleasure as a token of your good wishes for her Royal Highness' forthcoming wedding."

"I explained in the note that the design was so simple it could readily be altered if it did not fit. I thought she's wear about a 14," Mrs. Guerrieri said.

She was busily sewing for herself last night. "This black taffeta will be for the reception," she said, holding up the dress made only a few days before.

Trim and attractive in another dress she made, she began packing last night, making worrying little noises over what the weather might be.

Mrs. Guerrieri has never gone to design school. "I had a couple of hundred dollars saved up once or twice to go, but like any other mother, I usually put it some place where it was needed more."

Justly proud of her craftsmanship, she does her own designing.

One weekend bag will carry her wardrobe to England.

What she couldn't make on the machine last night she'll buy in New York today.

"I might as well sew all night—I won't be able to sleep," she sighed happily.

3 Killed, 11 Injured in Blast At Britain's Rocket Station

Aylesbury, England, Nov. 14 (AP). A German V-2 expert and two British research workers were killed and 11 other persons were injured today in an explosion at Britain's rocket station at Westcott, seven miles from here.

Dr. Johannes Schmidt, 44, the German scientist, and R. P. Rowlands, a Briton not otherwise identified, lost their lives in the blast. J. A. Salmon, also British, died in a hospital tonight.

The explosion, which was felt seven miles away, occurred in a testing hut about 150 yards from the administrative building of the station, which employs some 400 scientists and laborers.

The Ministry of Supply, in charge of the project, said the blast took place "during the testing of a rocket motor."

The British Press Association quoted one Westcott worker as saying that arrangements had been made to fire off two rockets and that when one was fired, the discharge apparently set off the other prematurely.

Schmidt did rocket missile research at Kiel for Germany during the war. He was credited with being mainly responsible for the engine of the first rocket fighter plane—the Messerschmitt 163.

He headed a team of 10 German scientists brought to Britain last December to continue their wartime rocket research, including the German V-1 and V-2 projects.

Dugan Against Court Control Over Police

Arlington County Board Member Daniel Dugan will ask that police appointive powers be removed from the hands of Circuit Judge Walter H. McCarthy at next Saturday's county board meeting.

If the board accepts his recommendation, a resolution favoring the move will be forwarded to the three Arlington delegates to the General Assembly for legislative action.

Dugan said he would ask that powe rto appoint, suspend and discharge county policemen be given to the county board to conform iwth tentative plans to place all Arlington employes on civil service status.

Cites Survey Being Made

He pointed out that job classification and salary scale scale survey now being made in the county "is one step toward a civil service system," and that the Virginia Legislature has empowered Arlington to adopt such a system.

The fact that county policemen now are picked by the Circuit Court "would not allow them to be brought under any merit system," Dugan said, adding that the "next logical step" is to give the county board the appointive power.

The row over who controls Arlington's police department began at the county board's October 25 meeting after County Manager A. T. Lundberg had suspended an Arlington detective for neglect of duty.

Legality Questioned

At the meeting, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas stated his belief that the County Manager Act gave Lundberg the power.

A few days later, however, Lundberg lifted the suspension and said control of the police department rested with the Circuit Court.

A special four-man committee meeting with Judge McCarthy this week to consider establishment of a police trial board also agreed that a 1946 act of Virginia General Assembly gave the court all powers of employment and discharge in the police department.

which he sumarized as follows:

"Firstly, that the program for European aid should be considered not primarily in terms of money but in terms of the idea which the money would promote.

"Secondly, that the basic idea should not be the rebuilding of prewar Europe, but the building of a new Europe which, more unified, will be a better Europe; and

"Finally, that promotion of that idea requires that we ourselves find for bizonal Germany, and particularly the Ruhr, political solutions which will enable German productivity to play a large part in promoting economic welfare in Europe. What I have said fits, I believe, into what Secretary Marshall has cogently and powerfully expounded."

Dulles recognized the fears felt by France and other neighboring countries that a restored Germany might become dangerous again. To allay such fears he proposed:

1. That at the coming meeting of the Foreign Ministers in London, the United States should try again to get acceptance of its proposed 40-year treaty of guarantee against German aggression. If Russia still refuses, Dulles said, the treaty should be signed anyway by the United States, Great Britain and France.

2. "To encourage the Ruhr to work vigorously for the recovery of Europe, but under international safeguards to prevent revival of the German war potential." He cited as a possible pattern the Port of New York Authority, set up by a treaty between New York and New Jersey to control seaport and airport facilities in the New York Harbor area.

Proposes a treaty

Later, answering a question, he thought the existing European Coal Organization might become a pattern for a supervisory authority in the Ruhr, and thought France would approve such a device.

"Certainly," he said, "if our Government believes in increased economic unity in western Europe, the place to begin is the Ruhr, which is both an area of unique economic significance and are area where we have governmental power.

"Let us not forget that today the United States is, in Germany, a western European government. Our exhortations to other western European governments will sound hollow if we ourselves fail to do what we expect of others. We ought to set the example."

He urged that the European recovery program should emerge from Congress "not merely as a competent technical document but as a dedication to a great work of creation."

"The program should be so clearly endowed with creative purpose that it will catch the imagination and enlist the strong support of the people both of Europe and of the United States. That, I know, is the intention of the Administration. But also on that matter the Nation relies heavily upon the coordinate effort and judgment of the Congress."

Dulles flew back to the United Nations Assembly at New York after hearing Chairman Vandenberg praise him for "an able and highly competent analysis." He plans to leave for London late next week, at Secretary Marshall's invitation, to attend the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Bill's Revision Asked

Representative Herter, who followed Dulles before the Senate committee, suggested it would be simpler to amend the post-UNRRA relief bill of last Spring than to write a brand-new bill for stopgap relief now.

All that would be needed, he said, would be to increase the amount of 332 million dollars provided by last year's bill; to allow at least 20 per cent of the money to be spent outside the United States, and to include France among the receiving nations. The bill enacted last May included Italy, Austria, Greece, China and Trieste, but not France.

Vandenberg called it an "interesting idea" and "well worth studying," but did not commit himself further. He said the Herter committee had done "an amazingly industrious and fruitful job, whether we agree with all its findings or not."

Herter also urged speedy creation of an agency to administer European relief and recovery. The two programs were so closely inter-related, he said, that Congress should set up such an agency before Christmas if possible.

Agrees on Sum Needed

He did not quarrel with the 597-million-dollar figure proposed by the Administration for stopgap relief, but insisted again that the amount of wheat available within Italy was almost a million tons more than the Administration's estimate. He disclosed that his figure came from the Department of Agriculture, which disagreed with the State Department's findings.

Senators Vandenberg and Lodge (R., Mass.) agreed with Herter that Congress should make clear to European peoples the shortage of supplies in this country, and the impossibility of committing the United States to any definite amount of wheat or other shipments

In the House committee hearing Representative Lodge drew a somber picture of Italian conditions as he saw them at first hand last summer. He said the Communist danger was greatest in northern Italy, and he "would not be surprised" to see an attempted coup before the April elections.

Cites Power of Reds

The Communists in Italy are so powerful, he said, that they could dispose of Italian police in about three days. He suggested using force against the Communists if necessary, but not with American troops, and he declined to explain his statement further.

Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) suggested increasing the appropriation for the "Voice of America" and other State Department overseas information activities to 50 million dollars. He also proposed that each country getting American relief should agree to give free time over its national radio to announcements telling the source of the relief supplies.

Representative Frances Bolton (R., Ohio), another of the returned congressional travelers, said Soviet presure was now concentrating on France, Italy and Austria, the same countries for which the Administration had sought stopgap relief.

Colonel Gilliam said the corn deal was closed on the basis of $104.22 per metric ton, free alongside steamer in Buenos Aires, which he believed to be just over $1 cheaper than a ton of corn placed on United States East Coast ports.

The difference in ocean freight rates will make Argentine corn approximately $3 per ton more expensive than United States corn when delivered in Bremerhaven, however, Colonel Gilliam said.

Judge's Request

Arlington Vote Study To Continue

A three-man committee appointed last year to study reshuffling or Arlington's voting precincts will reconvene early next week to further its deliberations.

Committee Chairman Charles R. Fenwick said resumption of redistricting committee sessions had been asked by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

A closed meeting has been tentatively scheduled for 8 p. m. Tuesday, Fenwick added, while a public hearing will also be held in the future.

Many Changes Favored

Last December, the committee had recommended many changes in precinct lines, and asked for the creation of several new precincts to reduce voter-load at individual polls.

But when Arlington civic groups complained that redistricting changes would only promote confusion during a year of many elections, the committee recommendations were not put into effect by Judge McCarthy.

Action to reconvene the committee came on the heels of the November 4 election, when final votes were not known for more than 30 hours after polls closed. Both the Democratic and Republican parties in Arlington have since called for a complete redistricting to avoid similar confusion next year.

Would Name 3 Employes

Meantime, the Arlington Electorial Board yesterday recommended that the county board name three county employes to conduct a "complete study" of county voting machinery.

The resolution asked that results be returned to the electoral board for study and a subsequent report to the county board. Included in the study, the resolution stated, should be consideration of the use of voting machines, redistricting of precincts, card index system for registration, and the pending revision of Virginia voting laws.

Grove Gets School Post

Woodstock, Va., Nov. 14.—Dr. Cecil S. Grove, Strasburg dentist, has been named to the Shenandoah County School Board by the School Trustee Electoral Board. He succeeds Arthur Davidson, editor of the Northern Virginia Daily, who recently resigned after serving for eight years.

Bridges Asks Check On Europe Supplies

Chairman of Probing Senate Group Urges 'RFC' Setup on Distribution of Aid Abroad

Concord, N. H., Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Chairman Styles Bridges of the Senate Appropriations Committee, charging wholesale European misuse and destruction of American relief goods, said today that United States aid should be halted until it was certain it reached the proper recipients.

In a two-hour press conference—his first since returning from a personal inspection of the European area—Bridges said that the United States should set up a sort of Reconstruction Finance Corp. to make certain goods sent for relief actually reach the common people for whom they are intended.

He told of "miles" of American goods, spoiling on a dump where they had lain a year or more. He told of Communist guerillas in Greece, wearing clothes and using weapons sent under lend-lease for use by the Greek army. He told of German war plants in the American zone being dismantled and shipped to Russia and its satellites — "the greatest potential threats at this time."

Sees Incongruity

"It's inconceivable," the Republican New Hampshire Senator said, "to have Congress called to appropriate 500 million dollars for the occupied areas in Europe, while at the same time we are allowing the destruction of the only chance to get Europe on a self-supporting basis."

The United States, he said, is doing in Europe "some of the most asinine things I ever heard of any country doing."

He urged that the United States send Army officers to work with the Greek army in their fight against Communist guerillas or withdraw all aid completely from Greece.

He said that 75 million dollars worth of supplies, vitally needed in the United States, are lying idle in a dump in a European country. (He withheld the scene of this dump.)

Would Blast War Plants

"I agree that all war plants in Germany should be dismantled—but I don't agree that they should be sent to Russia and her satellites," he said.

"Airplane factories and part plants should be blown up, not dismantled and given to one of the greatest potential threats at this time.

"That, to my mind, is not understandable and is stupid."

Bridges said that the only way to get Germany on a self-sustaining basis was through the use of manufactured articles for trading with other countries.

Regarding the shipment of American products to Europe, he said that most of the common people there felt they were being cheated by the United States because their governments re-sold donated foods and clothes at excessive prices.

"There should be no more American aid of any kind without an American follow-up," Bridges said.

Manpower Shortage Predicted For America in Another War

Boston, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Never again, in the event of a war, will the United States be "able to luxuriate in an excess of manpower," a high-ranking naval officer said today.

Capt. F. L. McDaniel, chief of the professional division of the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, told the fifty-fourth annual convention of the Association of Military Surgeons that "the next national emergency will undoubtedly call for mobilization of our entire population."

In the past, he said, it "is possible that in our desire to select individuals free from mental and physical taint, we have eliminated many who could successfully carry on if the proper duties were assigned them . . ."

McDaniel said about one third of all Navy medical discharges in World War II were for neuropsychiatric reasons and this "behooves us to reevaluate our recruit screening methods."

The Army's research and development program is based on manpower losses during World War II and "losses that are expected in a future war," Col. William S. Stone told the convention.

Stone, chairman of the Army's Research and Development Board, said that "with the possibility of extensive damage of our major population centers in any future war, manpower undoubtedly will be very critical. Its efficient utilization will largely determine the outcome of the war. . ."

U. S. Army Board To Give Military Advice to Greeks

The American Army mission to Greece is being expanded to provide military advice to tactical forces combating guerillas in the field.

An additional 90 officers and 80 enlisted men are being added to the advisory mission, Secretary of the Army Royall announced. Present strength is 26 officers and 14 men.

The expanded mission will furnish advice to Greek army units down to the level of divisions, Royall said. While major function of the Americans is to give technical aid to the Greeks in handling United States equipment sent them under the "Truman Doctrine," the U. S. Army officers can give tactical combat advice when asked for, an Army spokesman said.

Officials stressed, however, that none of the Americans will serve in command roles.

Green Asks Verdict Set Aside

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—Former Trial Magistrate Walter L. Green of Hyattsville today filed a motion in Federal Court to set aside a $2500 verdict against him in the commitment of Mrs. Melissa Rowe to Spring Grove State Hospital.

Green had filed a motion for a new trial immediately after an all-male jury November 6 awarded $2500 damages to Mrs. Rowe.

Mrs. Rowe, wife of Leslie Rowe of Brentwood, Md., had sought $250,000 in a civil suit, naming seven defendants, alleging she was deprived of her civil rights and "railroaded" to the Catonsville institution for 26 days in 1943.

Judge W. Calvin Chesnut ordered the cases against the other six defendants dismissed.

The court did not say when it would rule on Green's motion.

Green had testified he had no personal interest in the case when he signed papers committing Mrs. Rowe to Spring Grove March 8, 1943.

Courts And Home Rule

Chief Justice Laws of the District Court sees in the Auchincloss home-rule plan for the District danger of upsetting the equilibrium of the courts. His fears stem from some of the testimony given at the hearings and from the statement of the Subcommittee on Home Rule that it reserves the right to make a supplemental report on the relations between the proposed new government and the courts. Whether the committee has any intention of filing such a supplementary report we do not know. But we certainly hope that it will not permit the fight for home rule to get tangled up with any controversy over reorganization of the local courts.

The present judicial system in the District is working well. We quite agree with the testimony of Justice Stephens of the United States Court of Appeals for the District and Chief Justice Laws that there is no occasion for a reshuffling of jurisdiction between the courts serving the District. It had been suggested that several categories of cases, usually handled by State courts, including divorce, mental health, guardianship and adoption cases as well as criminal cases, be transferred from the District Court to the Municipal Court under the proposed District Charter. This would leave the District Court only Federal cases and, presumably, such cases as would go into Federal courts by reason of diversity of citizenship. The object seems to be to bring under District control judicial machinery comparable to that of the States. To be consistent, however, the proponents of this plan would have to urge creation of an entirely new court of general jurisdiction here. We know of no State which entrusts divorces and similar matters to municipal courts.

There is, moreover, a sound constitutional reason for leaving the jurisdiction of the Federal District Court undisturbed. Both Justice Stephens and Chief Justice Laws pointed out that major offenses committed here are crimes against the United States—not crimes against the District. Supreme Court decisions to this effect appear to be a serious barrier to the shifting of such cases to a strictly municipal court. In the District, Congress will always be sovereign; logic as well as sound practice calls for the prosecution of offenders against its laws in Federal courts.

It is a fallacy to suppose that the proposed new regime ought to duplicate State or city government in any detailed manner. Rather, it has to be tailor-made for the special situation existing only in the District of Columbia. The Auchincloss Committee has recognized this necessity in many of its recommendations. We hope that it will also see the desirability of leaving the present satisfactory court system undisturbed, at least until home rule becomes a going concern.

Cripps For Dalton

To what extent the Dalton resignation is due to dissatisfaction with his conduct of affairs at the British treasury is problematical. But it would be our guess that this was a factor in it. Of late, Dr. Dalton, who was a professor before entering public life, has been having a running argument with his former colleagues in the scholastic world over the use of the American loan. In the House of Commons he had charged the economists with using figures that were "a figment of the academic imagination." They retorted that perhaps he did not know the information himself. Certainly he has been more than vague. Last spring he had been forewarned—by American officials as well as British economists—that the pound sterling could not weather the coming into effect of the provision in the Anglo-American loan agreement allowing of free exchange into dollars on July 15. But Dr. Dalton was confident that the pound could be unblocked without danger. He proved to be wrong. With dollars again available, foreign and perhaps British holders of pounds started to draw down Britain's dollar stock, and the run became so serious that the Treasury again had to put up the bars.

Dr. Dalton was suffering from either overconfidence or lack of information. Even his defenders say that he was unaware of the dollar shortage existing in other countries which persuaded them to draw on Britain's store when dollars became available in Britain. But Dr. Dalton did not lose his equanimity in face of criticism. In subsequent debates he said that America was bound to extend more aid to Britain because the Americans were dependent on the maintenance of American exports—a statement lacking in both truth and propriety. His successor, Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister of Economic Affairs, is an altogether different personality. To all intents and purposes he has become the head of the British government in the new struggle to make both ends meet. The austere Sir Stafford is the reverse of overconfident, and never tries to mitigate the bleakness of the crisis with which Britain is contending. With this new portfolio his load will be onerous, but we trust that he will be seen one of these days in Washington, if only because the International Bank and the Monetary Fund, of which he presumably now becomes a governor, are located here. Much of the success of the Marshall Plan will depend on his leadership.

Knowledge—And Vision

One of the most significant happenings of this eventful year was the visit to Europe of over 200 of the members of Congress. Gone almost beyond recall are the days when Senator Borah prided himself on his physical isolation yet boasted of his own sources of information about Europe. The tendency is now to be "shown" in the Missouri way. It is a tendency that will make our Congress worthy of its self-esteem as the world's greatest deliberative assembly. To what extent the legislators have already gained in authority has been disclosed in the questioning of Secretary Marshall in Congress. It has been the usual thing to hear an interrogator start a question: "Mr. Secretary, I was told in . . ." and then proceed with what he was told, with the view of eliciting Mr. Marshall's comment. Most of the questions have been to the point and knowledgeable.

Another advantage of the visit is disclosed in the evidence brought back for submission to Congress. Outstanding among the reporters are the members of the House Committee under Representative Herter which was given a specific mandate to investigate conditions in Europe. The committee yesterday issued six reports of its conclusions. They deal with Italy, France, grain, fertilizer, coal, and iron and steel. The report that will attract most attention is that on Italy, not only because Italy is most in need, but also because of the author of the report, Representative Thomas A. Jenkins. It has long been evident that the Ohioan's horizon has been broadening under the impact of events. Now he is seen to have developed the quality of statesmanship. "Without further aid, and in the absence of political stability and of general recovery in western Europe," the Jenkins report winds up, "it appears probable that economic conditions will be so desperate that the Italian people will not be able to resist the establishment of a totalitarian government." The evidence is so well marshaled that no other conclusion is possible. The other reports are equally succinct, equally comprehensive, and furnish a testimonial of the industry and integrity of the Herter Committee. Altogether they differ only in slight detail from the Harriman report.

With the committee's ideas on the organization of ERP we have already expressed disagreement. But we agree with Representative Herter, in his testimony yesterday, that care must be taken not to raise false hopes in the recipient countries. He had in mind the State Department's unreported recommendations on food exports. The doleful news from the winter wheat belt underlined the Herter warning. Tomorrow is the traditional "cut-off date" of a dry fall, and if moisture conditions have not improved by then, the crop is bound to be shorter than the estimates, no matter how much moisture is provided by December and January snows. But this prospect puts a premium on forehanded conservation. We likewise agree with Mr. Herter that help could be expedited by simply amending the relief bill of last year for interim aid. Such a saving of time would accomplish the purpose of enabling Congress to set up an agency in the Capital which would then be in a position to administer the ERP on a favorable decision of Congress.

The measure of the problem has been sensibly outlined by what so far has been vouchsafed. However, there is danger that the ultimate aim of ERP may be lost to view in this consideration of details. Yesterday John Foster Dulles supplied a salutary reminder of the vision which inspired the Marshall approach in terms of the unity of Europe. Without this vision the Administration, no matter how ably set up, will fall short of success.

High Priest Of Law

John Bassett Moore died at a time when it may appear that a life given over to work on international law has been futile. One cannot read the news of the day without acute realization that naked force is still the dominant factor in the destiny of nations and peoples. That fact must have been very disillusioning to this high priest of international law. It is 56 years since Mr. Moore was appointed professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University; 41 years since he published his great Digest of International Law; 19 years since he sat as a judge of the World Court. There is a tendency today to assume that all his notable work toward establishment of a new system of law among nations belongs to an age of innocence that has now passed. But it is quite probable that the present day skepticism in this field is really the short-sighted view.

Historically speaking, the idea of international law is still young. Only a few hundred years ago intercourse with foreigners was generally forbidden. The term "international law" did not come into use until Jeremy Bentham first employed it after the United States came into the family of nations following our Revolutionary War. Not until 1899 did the nations acquire a Permanent Court of Arbitration, and the concept that nations are answerable to law that may be enforced by international agencies did not gain acceptance until the League of Nations and the World Court were created following World War I.

Actually, then, the struggle for a means of administering justice as between nations and for punishment of aggressor nations as aggressor individuals are punished within each national unit is in its infancy. The United Nations is admittedly a weak foundation on which to build an international legal order. Yet it reflects a widespread recognition of the fact that war can be abandoned only when a workable system of international law or world law has been put in its place. And the very fact that the democratic nations within the U. N. are engaged in a momentous struggle with the police state elements, which substitute dictatorship for law, tends to emphasize the importance of international law to the survival of the idea of liberty. It is still true, as Sir Robert Phillimore said many years ago, that "obedience to the law is as necessary for the liberty of states as it is for the liberty of individuals." We know of no greater cause to which the lives of scholars and statesmen can be devoted, even though our present preoccupation with lawless forces overshadows development of the principles for which John Bassett Moore stood.

Restitution

The law just announced by the Departments of State and Army for the restitution of property in Germany taken by duress under the Hitler regime is one which imposes enormous administrative difficulties yet is dictated by the most elementary considerations of justice. It would have been far better if this law could have been promulgated quadrilaterally throughout the four allied zones of occupation, instead of in the United States zone alone. But on this as on other matters, agreement with the Russians proved impossible of attainment. It would have been better if the law could have been enacted by the German laender governments instead of by the American Military Government. Enforcement must be in German hands, and is bound to be rendered all the more difficult if it is undertaken unwillingly. Nevertheless an effort is long overdue to restore to the surviving victims of Nazi oppression and injustice, so far as restoration is feasible, the material properties wrested from them through discrimination on account of race, religion, nationality, or political opposition to National Socialism.

Under the new law, any such property, when suitably identified, can be claimed by the rightful owners if it was taken from them by the Nazis during the period from January 30, 1933, to May 8, 1945. The claimants must return to the restitutor, in kind if possible, whatever consideration they received at the time of the wrongful transfer. It will be hard, of course, to distinguish between forced sales and thoroughly legitimate transactions; even more difficult to deal with bona fide transfers made after the original taking by duress. But these are problems with which the courts in Germany must wrestle. To ignore the victims of Nazi greed and ruthlessness merely because it is difficult to award them their due would be the grossest callousness. Most of those victims, unhappily, are past all hope of earthly justice, and the most valuable possessions which the Nazis seized—peace of mind, security, the sense of belonging to the community, homes and the relationships that homes entail—are quite beyond any sort of restitution at all.

Training For Democracy

The twelfth annual convention of the National Council of Negro Women, just completed in Washington, has afforded a heartening example of democracy in action. From some 24 States of the Union, delegates representing the 850,000 Negro women members of the organization assembled here for study and inspiration in dealing with the current problems of citizenship and of leadership in their home communities. The theme of the convention was: "Building a bridge to universal peace through understanding." And in the discussion understanding of issues was stressed no less than understanding of peoples. Four workshops were in session—on health, education and child welfare, on employment, on housing and on legislative strategy.

These women will go home with knowledge of the Marshall Plan, with a sense of the urgency of food conservation, with something of the know-how of mobilizing opinion and organizing for community action. This is the way things get done in a free country. We offer our congratulations to the National Council on their awareness of responsibility. And we offer them congratulations, too, on their perennially younger, more dynamic founder-president, Mary McLeod Bethune, one of the great women of America.

FOOTPRINTS

Whose feet are these that,
treading among the autumn trees,
have left, on weed and briar,
These prints of fire?

Here, on this darkened mold,
under the willow tree,
see this mark of burnished gold, and by the stream
this flame-bright copper gleam!

Who came in early morning mist?
What delicate tread
of vine, this print of flaming red?

Who came through here in this, the setting of the year, swift as a breath of vapor passing by, leaving by stone and grass
these marks of fiery dye, these signatures of death?

"Open The Archives"

On November 9 The Washington Post published a letter from Prof. William Langer, in which he made some comments on my article printed in the Saturday Evening Post, October 4, 1947. A few of Mr. Langer's statements, in my opinion, deserve further consideration on the part of your readers.

Mr. Langer refers to what he regards as my reflections on the integrity of Dr. S. Everett Gleason and himself as scholars. I made no reference whatever to Dr. Gleason in the Saturday Evening Post, for the reason that he did not figure in the Rockefeller Report for 1946. As for Mr. Langer's conception of the scholar's office, your readers may check my description of it for accuracy by scrutinizing Mr. Langer's Preface to Our Vichy Gamble and the Rockefeller Foundation's Report for 1946, pp. 188-189.

Mr. Langer says: "Professor Beard rails against 'subsidized' history and suggests that such history is bound to be biased." He does not quote my words correctly. What I objected to was "subsidized history of this kind [Mr. Langer's], prepared to serve a purpose fixed in advance." (Italics mine.)

In defense of himself, Mr. Langer treats the grant made by the Carnegie Corp. a few years ago to facilitate my work on The Idea of National Interest as on the same footing as the Rockefeller grant to facilitate his work on a history of the war. I submit that the two cases are utterly different.

The Carnegie grant for my work was made to the Social Science Research Council. This council is an organization of scholars only, who are officially designated by certain learned societies, for the purpose of promoting research. The executive director of the council asked me to undertake the study of the idea of national interest. The Carnegie Corp. made a grant to the council to aid in the prosecution of my study. It made the grant in its customary form, that is, without any reference whatever to ends which I might be expected to serve.

It is to me unthinkable that the president of the Carnegie Corp. could have used in connection with my study the kind of language used by the Rockefeller Foundation in connection with Mr. Langer's study (Report for 1946, p. 188); if the president of the Carnegie Corp. had done so, the Social Science Research Council doubtless would have rejected the grant and I certainly would have refused to touch the money.

As for the general order of the State Department relative to the opening of archives, to which Mr. Langer refers, we shall see what we shall see.

Thomas Committee

Speaking of your editorial, "Speaking of Americanism," of November 5, I am with you on the propositon that this is as good a time as any to examine the performance of the Thomas Committee on Un-American Activities against the background of "our basic political principles," but I only touch you in spots thereafter.

I see the question in this light:

1. The American system of government had its origin in the general acceptance, by the American people, of certain basic political principles. The system of government, and the basic political principles which gave it origin and strength to endure, are mutually interdependent; neither could exist, nor have meaning without the other.

2. The American system, and the basic political principles which sustain it, confer certain rights and privileges upon all who live within its orbit, but only those who honestly and sincerely seek to preserve and sustain the system and its basic political principles are entitled to regard as "inalienable" the rights and privileges which derive from them. Far from honestly and sincerely seeking to preserve and sustain the American system and its basic political principles, Communists (honestly) and fellow travelers (dishonestly) seek only the complete and utter destruction of both, in order to establish in their stead the totalitarian system and principles of communism.

3. Only they who honestly and sincerely subscribe to and conduct themselves in accordance with the American system and its basic political principles are entitled to be judged and dealt with in accordance with those principles. Communists and fellow travelers neither subscribe to nor conduct themselves in accordance with these principles.

4. My conclusions, therefore, are (a) that the tenets of Communists and fellow travelers and the American system and its basic political principles are mutually and intensely incompatible; and, as the Communists never hesitate to point out in the lands which they control, nothing could be sillier than the idea that two mutually antagonistic sets of political principles can coexist within one national framework; and (b) that we could make no greater mistake than to attempt to deal with Communists and fellow travelers in accordance with the requirements of our basic political principles.

Personal Choice

May I, without discourtesy, ask what is the value of a public opinion poll on the question, "If the United States does not send more aid to Europe, what do you think will happen over there?" What first-hand information does the man in the street have upon which to base an opinion on this subject which could be more than a blind guess or an echo of what he has been reading in the newspapers?

What point was there to an earlier Washington Post poll on the question, "Do you think we are going to have a depression?" Even the economists went wrong on that one.

Why not test public opinion on matters of personal choice, not prophecy?

For example, why not ask mothers, "Which of your sons would you be willing to sacrifice in order to help the British keep a German-born King on the throne of Greece against the will of the Greek people?"

Or ask fathers, "Which of your boys are you ready to see crippled for life in order to prevent Russia from having a share in the control of the Dardanelles?"

Or ask young men of draft age, "Would you rather lose a leg helping the United States and British oil companies hang on to their lush contracts for Arabian oil, or an arm defending a corrupt and tyrannical government in China?"

Such questions as these, instead of crystal-ball guessing contests, would indicate to the powers that be whether they needed to turn on more propaganda "news." Another result would be to make some of the "fight Russia now" idiots stop and think what another war would mean to them and all of us.

"Unified Reserve"

Your editorial of November 11, "Unified Reserve," reflects accurately what the average citizen knows about the Army and Air Force reserve components (i. e., the National Guard and the Army and Air Force Reserves). Unfortunately, both the editorial and the average citizen are full of misinformation and half truths advanced by those seeking to make the Guard, as you put it, a "purely Federal proposition." Major General Vaughan's recent article led off the campaign which your editorial furthers.

What is really behind this demand for unification of the Reserve and National Guard? It is simply money! National Guard funds are appropriated separately by Congress. The amount of money to be given the Army and Air Force Reserve is determined by the Army and Air Force and taken out of their regular funds. This amount may, of course, be reduced at any time by the Army or Air Force.

Last year, when the Army was running short of funds, it slashed the Army Reserve flying activities by two thirds, forced the dropping of two thirds of those Reserve pilots then flying, closed out completely several Reserve flying bases, reduced the number of planes available and took away all except trainer-type aircraft. Next, it took a look at the National Guard funds and attempted to lift 60 million dollars. However, the Guard was not a "Federal proposition" at that time, and the Army succeeded only after a hard and dirty fight. The Guard is forewarned now and it won't happen again.

Despite high-sounding indorsements by regular officers of a large, well-equipped and well-trained reserve, these same officers do not hesitate to emasculate any reserve program competing with the regulars for money.

The regular establishment has no love for the nonregular. Proof of this fact is everywhere. The local air unit of the Guard was to receive new aircraft which were to be completely overhauled at a depot. The Guard had already paid the Army $4000 per airplane for the work. What did we receive? Last February the first of nine P-47s to arrive turned out to be wornout junk that should never have been flown even to Andrews Field. We refused to accept them and, with the help of the National Guard Bureau, forced the Army to cough up the goods it had already been paid for.

Some of these P-47s are still parked back in the bushes at Andrews Field—still not flyable. Could the Reserve unit at Andrews have called the Army's hand even if it had dared to protest? The Army's answer to this situation is "unification."

Any argument that "unification" would furnish, as you suggest, "one organization that could supervise a well-rounded training program," is so much eye wash. The Army and Air Force already are required to set up training programs and standards for National Guard units. Furthermore, there is a regular officer assigned to each unit to see that the programs and standards are carried out. The Army and Air Force can withdraw Federal recognition (cut off the payroll) any individual or unit which is below standard. Any criticism by the Army and Air Force as to the quality of Guard units is therefore merely criticism of the Army's own training program for the Guard and the Army's own supervisory personnel.

An "interdepartmental committee" has been formed to study the situation. However, there is not a single Reserve officer appointed. Is there any question about who will be speaking for the Reservist? Let's call a spade a spade.

Commaiding Officer.

Revere Rides Again

"THE AMERICAN people are asleep!" declaimed the shabbily dressed little man with thick glasses, an old slouch hat on the back of his head, a folded newspaper in his hand.

"It's the truth!" he continued earnestly, addressing a startled, middle-aged woman on the streetcar loading platform. "Sleeping like a log."

His fur-jacketed listener smiled tolerantly and winked at her two well-dressed companions. All looked as if they had just come from a club luncheon.

"Yes, dead from the neck up," went on the man, blinking his pale blue eyes behind his heavy lenses. Other persons on the platform looked knowingly at each other, smiled or tittered. An elderly man surveyed the scene in an Olympian manner, shook his head sadly.

"They don't know what it's all about," continued the little man. "Now take this A-bomb. They'll never wake up till it hits 'em. You watch and see." The three women smiled again and exchanged significant glances. Just then the car came.

THE LITTLE man went toward the back where a group of high school students were seated. He sat down beside a slick haired youth in a plaid blazer. "Yes sir," he immediately told the boy, "the American people are asleep." The youth turned an astonished face. The other students were suddenly silent.

"They don't know what it's all about. They don't wanna know. They're asleep, I tell you!" The students snickered. The reddened youth looked at his companions and tapped his forehead.

"It used to be other countries were scared of us," went on the little man. "Now we're going to be scared if we don't wake up." Several students guffawed. "Hey, Bill, who's your friend?" called one. Bill was getting redder.

"Look at 'em goin' around asleep. It's the truth—"

Bill suddenly got up and pushed past the little man. He followed several companions to the door, and as they noisily clambered off the car, the shouts drifted back, "Say, Bill, who was your friend?"

The little man moved over by the window. A spruce, freshly barbered, gray-haired man, with shell-rimmed spectacles, matching tie and handkerchief, and signet ring, sat down beside him and opened a newspaper. In a moment the new arrival looked up in bewilderment. "The American people," a voice beside him was saying, "are asleep."

The remaining students tittered expectantly. The newcomer regarded his seatmate disdainfully, returned to his newspaper. "Now take this A-bomb," went on the little man. "People don't know what it's all about—"

The man irritably got up and moved to another seat. In a moment his place was taken by a regal young woman with an impassive, synthetically sun-tanned face, and a very red mouth. Over her shoulders was a double silver fox scarf.

"AS I WAS saying," the little man told her, "the American people are asleep—asleep at the switch." The phrase pleased him. "That's the truth. Asleep at the switch!" Laughter came from the back of the car.

The girl with a quick, cold look appraised her companion, turned her face away. He went on talking. "They don't know what it's all about. Just look at 'em."

Two women shoppers in the seat ahead, a child standing between them, turned and gasped. "It's the truth!" he told them. "Everybody's asleep." The women grinned significantly at each other. The child, responding to their unusual lift of mood, laughed delightedly. More passengers turned to stare. The girl in the silver foxes further turned her back to make it clear she had no connection with her seatmate.

"They don't wanna know what it's all about," the little man continued addressing a fox's head she had thrust directly under his nose. Smug smiles spread over the faces of the onlookers. "Poor man," remarked a benevolent-looking matron across the aisle to her seatmate.

"Now take this A-bomb," the little men went on talking to the fox. "Take the whole situation. People are asleep, I tell you." The students guffawed. A beagle-eyed man turned abruptly and looked the speaker over suspiciously.

"The FBI or somebody ought to pick him up," whispered a woman passenger. "Oh, I think he's entirely harmless," said the benevolent-looking matron.

The car stopped. The little man got up hurriedly. "It's the truth," he told the gaping women in front of him as he started up the aisle. "Yes, sir! Dead from the neck up!"

Loyalty Board

In studying the roster of the President's Loyalty Review Board, one finds it difficult to imagine a more imposing array of citizens for any assignment. All are men and women of renown, distinguished in their respective fields of endeavor. Their years of experience with American institutions form an adequate background for sober judgment and a high sense of responsibility. Their pattern of conduct through the years has left no doubt as to their loyalty.

Thus the President is to be commended for the high standard he set in the appointment of the Loyalty Review Board. It is to be regretted, however, that out of 12 million Negroes, the President could not find one who could, on all counts, measure up to that standard.

German Communism

A Communication

THE ANNOUNCEMENT by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor in Germany, of the commencement of an open propaganda drive against communism in the United States zone is of considerable significance in view of the approaching Foreign Ministers' Conference in London later this month. Even more significant is the fact that the drive will not be negative, but will consist of an intensive effort to demonstrate to the German people the benefits of the democratic way of life. An examination of some past events may serve to illustrate the importance of this new program, which constitutes a radical departure from previous procedures.

Our basic political policy, as laid down by the Potsdam Protocol and JCS (Joint Chiefs of Staff) Directive 1067, was to make certain that Germany would never again threaten her neighbors or the peace of the world. This was to be accomplished by denazification, demilitarization and democratization.

Since July, 1945, Military Government, acting in accordance with this basic policy, has performed some remarkable tasks, working against very great odds. To date, we have completely demilitarized our zone of Germany. Our denazification program has been progressing satisfactorily, despite rumors to the contrary.

Between the date of the initial occupation and June 1, 1946, our emphasis was largely a negative one, limited to the removal and exclusion of active Nazis and militarists from public employment and important positions in private industry. Operating under this system, American Military Government personnel investigated over 1,456,467 Germans. Of these 373,762 active Nazis and militarists were removed or excluded and 1,082,705 persons were retained or employed.

When the German denazification tribunals began to function in June, 1946, the emphasis was shifted to a positive one, requiring each German to be punished to the extent of his degree of guilt, or cleared if no evidence of Nazi activity existed. By July 31, 1947, after over one year of German denazification tribunal operations in the United States zone, 12,025,584 persons had been registered. Of these 8,734,925 were found to be apparently not chargeable. A total of 3,290,659 were determined to be chargeable, and of these 1,998,958 have been amnestied. The remainder have been or will be sentenced to various types of punishment commensurate with their degree of Nazi activity.

WITH RESPECT to positive political accomplishments, constitutional government has been restored in the United States zone with local self-government and independent political parties fully established. An independent judiciary has been restored and the basic civil rights, including free speech, free press, freedom of religion and other fundamental democratic safeguards, have been guaranteed, both by Military Government and German legislation.

Thus, it can be seen that in our zone of Germany, we have eliminated or at least made dormant the forces of Nazism and we have established the forms of democracy. We have built the house. It is now up to the Germans to furnish it with our assistance. In other words, it is now our task to instill in the German mind the meaning and advantages of our way of life. This is admittedly a very difficult task in the light of Germany's undemocratic or rather antidemocratic past. The difficulty is that Germany has neither a democratic tradition nor a democratic past and the German people are politically adolescent.

During the past two years, Russia has been hard at work attempting to create as much disorder and chaos as possible in order to prevent the growth of democracy in Germany. By refusing to accede to either political or economic unification of Germany, except upon terms which would be wholly unacceptable to the United States, Great Britain and France, Russia has effectively prevented the establishment of political and economic normalcy which are so vital to the success of democracy in Germany, in the hope that the German people could be successfully "communized" as a result of chaos and disorder. She has filled the United States zone with a propaganda barrage, she has done everything possible to undermine democratic influences and she has finally abandoned all of her military commitments with her former allies by directly attacking the United States Military Government and its policies, using the media of her controlled German-language newspapers, periodicals and radio facilities.

THE UNITED STATES, on the other hand, has abided by her commitments in every possible way, scrupulously refraining from any attacks against Russia or her policies by means of American-controlled information media. As a result, the bewildered Germans in our zone have received only a formal and reserved orientation in democracy from our Military Government, while at the same time, they have been subjected to a barrage on the benefits of Communism and Soviet political philosophy. Our approach has been negative, whereas the Soviet approach has been militant, antagonistic and virulent.

Fortunately, Communism is even more foreign to the Germans than democracy and, as a result, it has not been able to make very great inroads in the western zones of Germany, despite Russia's effort. This is clearly indicated by the fact that in six elections held in the United States zone, the German Communists have only been able to poll an average of approximately 6 per cent of the votes. It should be noted that between June, 1941, and Germany's capitulation in 1945, the German people were subjected to a constant propaganda barrage with respect to Soviet Russia and Communism. As a result, the Germans were in mortal terror of the Russians and hundreds of thousands of Germans fled to the United States zone in the wake of the Russian armies and many are still arriving daily.

The real danger of Communism in Germany lies in the fact that when people are hungry and hopeless and their economic situation is chaotic, Communism with its false promises, lies and panaceas, does hold an attraction for them. It has, therefore, become imperative for the American Military Government to begin an anti-Communist campaign.

Why have we waited so long? Because of our quadripartite commitments and policy. On September 30, 1946, the American Military Governor issued a directive entitled "Instructions for German Information Services," which laid down certain fundamental rules with respect to freedom of speech and press and expressed our desire to encourage these freedoms in the German information media. However, they were warned that "Dissemination of any type of news, information or editorial, which constitutes a malicious attack upon policies or personnel of Military Government, aims to disrupt unity among the Allies, or seeks to evoke the distrust and hostility of the German people against any occupying power, is prohibited."

This directive applied only to the United States zone. However, on October 12, 1946, the Allied Control Council enacted Control Council Directive No. 40, which laid down the policy to be followed by German politicians and the German press with respect to all four zones of Germany. After stating that German democratic parties and the German press were to be allowed to discuss freely German political problems and to comment on the policy of the occupying powers in Germany, the directive provided that "Members of German political parties and the German press must refrain from all statements and from the publication or reproduction of articles which . . . contribute toward the spreading of . . . antidemocratic ideas; . . . spread rumors aimed at disrupting unity among the Allies, or which cause distrust and a hostile attitude on the part of the German people toward any of the occupying powers; . . . appeal to Germans to take action against the democratic measures undertaken by the commanders in chief in their zones.

IN ABSOLUTE and brazen defiance of this directive, Soviet-controlled German information media in the Russian zone have been constantly attacking the United States and her policies. Protests by General Clay to the Russian Military Governor have failed to elicit either satisfactory reply or explanation.

The remaining question is why did General Clay decide to institute an active anti-Communist campaign at this time, in complete reversal of his policy to abide by Directive No. 40. There seem to be two possible explanations. First, in the event that Soviet Russia abides by her obstructionist policy at the forthcoming London Conference and refuses to agree to the unification of Germany, the only alternative left to the western powers will be the unification of the three western zones and the abandonment, at least for the time being, of the Soviet zone.

In this event, General Clay wants the German people to know the facts beyond any question. He apparently wants it quite clearly established that the blame for the dismemberment of Germany falls squarely upon the shoulders of Soviet Russia, so that the Russians will not be able to place this responsibility effectively upon the western nations as a further incentive to communism in that area.

However, there is another possible basis for General Clay's action. In the event that the Soviets agree at London to some sort of unification of Germany, it is likely that they will do so only in the hope of establishing a strong central government in Berlin, which they will then try to infiltrate with Russian-trained German Communists, just as they have done in the Balkans. To offset this possibility, it has become vitally important for the American Military Government to launch a campaign which would not only "debunk" communism and give the Germans the real story of what is seriously and perhaps fatally retarding and preventing their economic and political recovery, but also to wage an aggressive campaign designed to show the Germans as graphically and realistically as possible the benefits and advantages of democracy.

It is hoped that this campaign together with our policy of economic rehabilitation in Germany will serve to permanently destroy the effectiveness of any Soviet program aimed at the communization of Germany. The Germans are willing to work. If we can show them the way and give them the food and fuel necessary to enable them to exist until their own economy can support them, communism will be a dead issue in Germany.

2 Unmasked Men Rifle Safety Deposit Boxes

Rosebud, Tex., Nov. 14 (AP).—Two unmasked men broke into the First National Bank here at 2 a. m. today and rifled safety deposit boxes of papers and valuables that may run as high as $100,000.

V. D. Nicholson, president of the bank, said he could not give an accurate estimate of the loot taken, but told Sheriff Brady Pamplin he wished he knew that "it was as little as $100,000."

Rep. Mundt Announces Candidacy for Senate

Madison, S. Dak., Nov. 14 (AP).—Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) today announced his candidacy for the United States Senate just before his departure by plane for Washington to attend the special session of Congress.

The Madison Congressman is serving his fifth term in the House. Incumbent Senator Harlan J. Bushfield (R.) announced several weeks ago he will be a candidate for reelection next year.

Eisenhower And MacArthur

A GREAT deal of the talk about a general for President comes from those who feel that nothing less than a military hero will do in the White House in these turbulent times. This has come with the aftermath of every major war in which the Nation has been involved.

CHILDS

After all, George Washington was the hero of the Revolutionary War. But he happened also to be a great statesman and a man of such selflessness and devotion to the country that he could never be accused of seeking office for reasons of personal ambition.

The feeling today seems to be that the available civilian candidates fail to measure up to the demands of the time. With this goes a general sense of insecurity and a rather pathetic belief that a man who has proved his prowess on the field of battle will somehow be able to resolve all our troubles. In other words, it is a confession of doubt in democracy itself.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who is soon to retire as Chief of Staff and who was commander of all the Allied armies in Europe in World War II, is not the only military man mentioned for the Presidency. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of American forces in the Pacific and hero of the Philippines, is also listed as a candidate.

In fact, Lansing Hoyt of Milwaukee, who professes to speak for the general, says MacArthur will return from Japan in the spring and openly proclaim his candidacy. Thus far, no denial has come from the general.

MacARTHUR will be the last of the heroes to come home. He will undoubtedly get a triumphal reception as he moves across the country. Behind him will be not merely his impressive military record but his achievement as occupation chief in Japan.

His admirers like to contrast the Japanese occupation with Germany. Naturally this reflects credit on their hero. But it is unfair to those who have struggled with the complexities of the German problem.

It does not belittle MacArthur's remarkable achievement to point out that the circumstances in Japan were entirely different. Unlike the situation in Germany, where authority is divided four ways, in Japan the sole authority has been MacArthur. Also, a Japanese government was in being at the time of the surrender. As occupation chief, MacArthur can invoke the power of an Emperor who in the recent past was considered by his subjects as the Son of Heaven.

MacArthur and Eisenhower have for each other a deep antipathy. For four years, Eisenhower served under MacArthur in the Philippines, and the relationship was not a happy one. The two men are utterly dissimilar in temperament and outlook.

With the war the resentment grew. MacArthur felt that his command in the Pacific was being starved in order to build up Eisenhower's invasion forces in Europe.

IN A striking way the hostility between America's two top-ranking generals symbolizes the rivalry between the two areas of interest that claim America's attention. If this jealous rivalry between Europe and Asia had ended with the war, it would have been no more than a curious historical phenomenon, but the rivalry has carried over into the peace. There are those who would actually sidetrack the Marshall Plan in order to "save" China. And their clamor and conniving seriously hamper American policy.

As we should have learned long ago, any artificial division of American interests as between Europe and Asia is arbitrary and dangerous. Such a division reflects complete failure to understand America's position in the world. We must use our resources where the need is most urgent and where they will produce the greatest dividend in stability and security, particularly since our resources are not limitless.

If it came to the necessity of choosing between generals, the public would in all probability prefer to see Eisenhower in the White House . . . Age alone would have not a little to do with this. Soon to be 68, MacArthur is 4½ years older than President Truman and 22 years older than Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. Eisenhower is 57.

MacArthur has another handicap in his great admirer and champion, Col. Robert R. McCormick. Colonel McCormick is just now in Japan. Recently, according to news reports, several thousand soldiers in MacArthur's command were assembled to hear McCormick declare that America was demanding MacArthur for President. There may have been stranger spectacles in America's political past, but history does not record them.

I do not believe that this country has come to such a pass that we need a general to unify us. Able men are contending for the Presidency—men with long experience in politics and public affairs. If we cannot furnish leadership for high office, our democracy will be at an end and it will not matter very much who gives the orders.

Hirohito Sees MacArthur

Tokyo, Japan, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Emperor Hirohito visited General MacArthur for an hour today in the sixth of "regular contact" meetings between the Allied supreme commander and the Japanese monarch.

U. S. Advisory Unit to Train Chinese Troops for Combat

Nanking, China, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Officers of the American advisory group have been authorized by Washington to begin full-scale training of combat troops for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's armies, it was reported today.

The "green light" for training activities came as Secretary of State George C. Marshall's request for 300 million dollars to aid Nationalist China indicated that American policy had changed over from "inaction" to all-out military and economic support for Chiang's government.

Meanwhile, it was reliably reported here that the next phase of the government's battle against the communists would be a months-long campaign between the Yellow and Yangtse Rivers.

Chiang reportedly told the State Council that the resurgent communist power between the two great rivers in central China could be decimated in a short time.

Communist forces are now believed to hold half of Honan Province, a third of Anhwei Province, and small areas in the costal Province of Kiangsu.

The training authorization from Washington reportedly permits the advisory group, previously allowed to train only technicians and maintenance personnel, to begin "advising" and training a division of Chinese combat infantry at once, as a preliminary to large activities.

Five United States officers have been at the divisional training center on Taiwan (Formosa) Island since November 3, organizing combat instruction activities. Others will follow before the end of the month.

Gen. Sun Li-jen, commandant of the training center, is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute and a close friend of Secretary Marshall

Wherever and whenever you ride public transit in Washington, you're in the front row of a colorful show appealing to Washington buyers.

Next time you board a street car or bus, look at the Transitads (car cards) and you'll see what we mean.

Transitads (car cards) keep you informed of the products and services that are "for sale" in Washington. To get attention, to display their products and services to best advantage, Transitad-vertisers present their messages in eye-compelling colors. That's a definite aid to you when you're out buying a particular product or brand on your merchant's shelves.

More than that, new products, new services are constantly being announced via Transitads. It might well be that you are a potential buyer for a new product or service that's being offered on a Transitad right now. Check the Transitads tomorrow, as you're riding the street car or bus. Wherever you sit (or stand) you're in the front row.

A Missouri Miracle

'Show Me' Girl Evades Truman

By Richard L. Coe

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE: Virginia Mayo couldn't have given a merrier luncheon than yesterday's at the Statler even though no one came away with a smidgen of news . . . This Missouri girl (no, she didn't go to the White House) has a wondrously dry sense of humor and has no illusions about show business, which there's no business like . . . She's worked her way up from chaperoning Pansy the Horse to being one of Sam Goldwyn's most reliable players . . . Accompanying her was Helen Allen, one of those lassies with the beauty and chic which seem to be requirements for Goldwyn publicity representatives . . . The girls had seen all the Washington reviews of "Christmas Eve," which took a unanimous slugging from the town's theater-going quartet, and they couldn't get over them . . . "Why, in Hollywood," they gurgled, "you'd never find such outspoken reviews." . . . So, you see, in no time the girls had us all eating out of their hands . . . Virginia talked merrily of the fun they had with Danny Kaye making "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," an operation scene in particular . . . "It's for the classes and the masses," chuckled the blonde star . . . which made Helen shudder, because catch lines like that have gotten jobs for ad writers at the expense of other ad writers' jobs . . . Virginia had a dozen appointments during the day for radio, store and charity appearances . . . She's just finished another musical with Kaye and is still pleased with the notices she got from her work in "The Best Years of Our Lives," a straight dramatic role . . . She's recently married to Michael O'Shea of the screen and her gold wedding ring is mighty handsome . . . She wore a cluster of pearl necklaces and a black dress that looked snappy to us . . . "The new look?" we asked . . . "Gosh," she said, "I don't know. I think I've been wearing this dress for years" . . . Which speaks well for the Goldwyn designers even though Virginia and your reporter are pretty vague about fashions . . . See? No news at all.

JUDITH EVELYN in town briefly with the Neil Hamiltons and Wilbur Evans . . . Evans had been on a singing tour in the South and the others drove down to pick him up . . . Judith's "Camille," with decor by Cecil Beaton, has just been indefinitely postponed on the grounds that the public won't go for "costume stuff" . . . Odd reasoning considering the success of "Lady Windermere's Fan" and oceans of new movies . . . Judith's now reading new scripts and hoping for a good one . . . The same's true of Neil Hamilton, now that "State of the Union" has closed . . . Like a lot of theater people these days, Miss Evelyn, Hamilton and Evans are anxious about the high cost of productions . . . Judith filled with talk of another Judith, Miss Anderson, who's been getting raves for her "Medea" in New York . . . "Get a seat in the first or second row for that one," warns Miss Evelyn . . . "It's like going to a burlesque show. You want to be as close to the runway as possible."

RICHARD ALDRICH, producer-husband of Gertrude Lawrence, involved in a torrent of work . . . As managing director of Theater, Inc., he's plotting a revival of Ibsen's "The Master Builder," with Paul Muni and Betty Field . . . He's planning an acting company for New York's City Center Theater for productions in January and February . . . And to that he's added a separate venture with Richard Myers to bring over Dublin's Gate Theater company, due to arrive in Canada in January . . . (It's odd, isn't it, Dublin with the Gate and Abbey theater companies, and Washington with none?) . . . Mrs. Aldrich, by the way, is doing very well on her own . . . As star of the revived "Tonight at 8:30," she's getting 15 per cent of each week's gross plus 50 per cent of the play's profits, as canny a financial coup as the theater offers.

SAM GOLDWYN ought to find his current Washington visit revealing if only on the "no double-features" front. . . . Our town doesn't go in for this the way others do, which is all right with Sam. . . . He's telling the theater owners that turning theaters in to "bargain basements" has a harmful effect on movie programs. . . . Movie theaters, he told them, are losing audiences in the 30-40-year-age group, the most discriminating theatergoers as well as those best able to afford entertainment. . . . "Quality," says Sam, "is the real need of the movies today."

WEEKEND BRIEFS: "The Captive Heart" goes into its second week today at the Hippodrome . . . Eisenstein's Mexican film, "Time in the Sun," is the Sunday night revival of Community Education, Inc., 914 20th st. . . . "Blackmail" and "Helldorado" close the Sidney Lust drive-in theater at Beltsville tonight . . . Paul Foley's Airport auto theater stays open for at least another week—possibly longer, depending on the weather . . . International Student House at 1825 R st. has a Saturday night film series; "The Man in Gray," with James Mason and Margaret Lockwood, is tonight's bill . The time's 8:30.

TOMORROW: "Why doesn't the National have more new plays?" some readers ask. Richard L. Coe gives some of the reasons.

Show Time for Stage and Screen

eral pattern have occurred in Venice, Naples, Genoa, La Spezia and many other smaller places throughout Italy.

In Rome today, Communist Chieftain Palmiro Togliatti called leftist party leaders, including Socialist Pietro Nenni, into a conference to outline further concerted efforts against Premier Alcide de Gasperi's government. The meeting followed a stormy session of the Constituent Assembly yesterday, at which leftists tried to howl down Interior Minister Mario Scelba, who sought to report that the disorders were not exceptional and that the government was fully in control.

One of the events which has pulled the wave of killings and assassinations to a political level was the murder several days ago near Palermo of the labor union organizer Vito Pivitone. Northern Communists went on the warpath after that in what they said was a reprisal against "Fascists."

U. N. Military Staff Unit To Visit Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Approximately 30 members of the United Nations military staff committee will visit the Naval Academy next Thursday.

On arrival they will be greeted by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent. They will lunch with the midshipmen in the mess hall and witness a review—the last of the year-on Worden Field.

and store shutdown took place when the General Council of Labor ordered a full dress observance during the funeral of the Communist riot victim.

The growing strike movement spread from the port district, tied up tight by the walkout of longshoremen and seamen, and some heavy industries, construction and trucking, to textiles and the gas works. Longshoremen and building workers at Sete, 100 miles down the coast, walked out in sympathy and demanded higher pay.

Mobile guard detachments were sent to the St. Antoine quarter where strikers virtually took control, stopping streetcars and trucks, and dumping vanloads of furniture into the street. A clash was avoided when the guards permitted the strikers to continue their activities. The strikers agreed, however, to let food trucks through. Longshoremen also began unloading food cargoes at the port. A skeleton crew kept up a thin supply of gas at the struck gas plant.

In Paris, Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier's government said it had adopted a number of measures in a cabinet meeting to prevent a recurrence of the Marseille rioting and to punish civil servants who "were not sufficiently energetic at their jobs."

The communique did not say what the measures were. Ramadier yesterday declared Communists were responsible for the rioting.

their families were cooperating. Thus, the Citizens' Food Committee apparently has done a good job in winning and holding support. Another indication that the educational efforts have been effective is seen in the growing number of people familiar with the committee's major recommendations or at least with the broad objectives.

Committee officials have announced that the program would enter a new phase beginning December 1, when consumers on a community basis will be asked to reduce use of a specific food item each week.

Luckman recently expressed confidence that the emergency goal of 100 million bushels of wheat would be saved by January 1. Other committee officers have stated that voluntary food conservation must continue after that goal has been met.

U. S. Tobacco Buying Plan Remains Stymied

An assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Anderson sid yesterday that the inactive status of the Government's proposed flue-cured tobacco buying program remains unchanged.

The program has not been put into effect because buyers who would act as agents for the Government have not agreed that they would take the tobacco off the Government's hands when Great Britain reentered this country's tobacco market.

Police attributed all 10 killings of the past three days to Stern Gang members taking vengeance for the death Wednesday of five youthful Sternists, including three girls, shot in a raid on an underground training station.

British ships and planes, meanwhile, were alerted to keep sharp watch along the coast as unconfirmed reports said another illegal immigrant ship was heading for Palestine.

Arabs Urge British To Delay Departure

By a Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, Nov. 14.—The Arab League, which has been insisting that the British leave Palestine, tonight pleaded that the British change their decision to evacuate troops by next August 1.

Faris El Khouri of Syria, spokesman for the league, told reporters that the British must be persuaded to remain until the United Nations finds an answer to the numerous problems posed by partition of the Holy Land.

Herschel Johnson of the United States and Lester B. Pearson of Canada proposed tonight that independence for the Arab and Jewish states be changed to August 1, instead of July 1 as previously agreed upon.

Integrity Marks Film About POWs

By Richard L. Coe

"THE CAPTIVE HEART," at the Hippodrome, is a finely made deeply moving and honest film about a difficult subject—Britishers in a German prisoner of war camp during the war.

This import is British to the core. It has the integrity one associates with the better English films—honesty of setting, restraint of character and dignity of purpose.

The story it tells is possibly unlikely, but then so were many things which happened during the war. A Czech who has escaped from a concentration camp hides his identity by assuming that of a dead British officer. Captured, he spends four years with the British in a German POW camp and protects his life by writing to the wife of the man whose identity cards he holds.

Most of the film is devoted to the years in the lonely camp. By purposefully portraying the dullness of the life, the film attempts a matter that is pictorially daring. And somehow it comes off effectively, the endless procession of seasons in a lonely spot which, to its inhabitants, becomes a world in itself. It is effective because the approach is uncompromising.

This is done through natural casting. While the leading characters are played by professional actors, the film was made through active cooperation of Britain's Army of the Rhine and one of the Highland divisions. The men seem to be real and their speech is pretty realistic. (You'll even notice one spot in the soundtrack which evidently has been clipped to accommodate the chaste ears of American audiences.)

"THE CAPTIVE HEART." Universal International-Prestige release, produced by Ealing studios of Michael Balcon. Screenplay by Angus McPhail and Guy Morgan from a story by Patrick Kirwan. Directed by Basil Dearden. Music by Alan Rawsthorn, played by the Philharmonia Orchestra. At the Hippodrome.

Praise for Red Cross Aid

There's a one-pipper, a subaltern who goes blind because the Germans refuse a necessary eye operation. There are two "other rankers"—a private and a corporal who've been in business together before the war; the wife of one dies in childbirth shortly after he becomes a prisoner. There are the lads who say "Bob's your uncle," and who sing that song which one will always identify with World War II—"Bless 'Em All."

The importance of Red Cross packages and mail from home provide a heartening example of what you yourself may have done during those bleak days. The indefiniteness of "the duration" is the hardest thing these men have to bear and how important little incidents can be in admirably dramatized.

It's interesting, too, that the portrayal of the Germans reflects what one used to hear of them as POW caretakers during the war. They were considerably more humane than their Italian allies and the British filmmakers are faithful to this idea. Some of our personal friends were prisoners of the Italians and we recall they always used to say they wished they'd been caught by the Germans. While there are signs of Sadism in "The Captive Heart," they are of individual cases; the overall picture respects the international covenants.

Romance by Mail

The Czech (a professor of English from Prague, finely played by Michael Redgrave) ultimately meets the widow he has been corresponding with in the guise of her husband and the film suggests that their paper love will come to fruition. This fact has been handled with enough understanding to make such an idea acceptable.

The acting is knowingly done, with Redgrave's leading role outstanding. Rachel Kempson, his real-life wife, plays the woman whose letters comfort him and you'll find such noted British players as Frederick Leister, as her father; Elliot Mason, as the Scottish subaltern's mother; Basil Radford, as the major whose prewar interest was racing; and Ralph Michael (remember him at the National in "Love Goes to Press"?) as a medical officer.

There's nothing gay or glamorous about it, but there is an honesty and integrity about "The Captive Heart" which makes it an admirable film.

Negro Schools' Lack Shown at Hearing in Va.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—A Negro photographer of Richmond told Judge Sterling Hutcheson today that Negro schools in King George County lack essential facilities found in white schools there, while a white official of the State Department of Education testified that the county's Negro school facilities are "entirely adequate."

This testimony was introduced in Federal District Court in a trial today in which Negro residents of the county sought a Federal injunction restraining State school authorities from "willful discrimination" against Negro pupils in the matter of educational facilities.

Still under advisement by the court is a similar case tried several days ago in which Negro teachers in Chesterfield County alleged discrimination against them in the matter of salaries paid.

Identifies Own Photos

Allan C. Brodnax, Army Signal Corps veteran and professional photographer here, identified from the stand today a number of photographss he had taken of white and Negro schools in King George. The pictures showed contrasting views of interior and exterior equipment and facilities at the King George Training School, only Negro school in the county, and the King George High School for whote students.

Brodnax testified that while photographing the two schools he observed that the white institution was steam heated from a central heating plant, was supplied with running water, equipped with indoor flush-type toilets and had a library, cafeteria, gymnasium and auditorium.

The Negro school, he testified, had no running water, was heated by stoves made from discarded oil drums, had outdoor latrine-type toilets and lacked a gymnasium or auditorium.

Excerpt Put in Record

Arthur E. Chapman, supervisor of school buildings for the State department of education, read into the record an excerpt from an investigation committee's report pointing out that "the present facilities at the King George training school (Negro) are entirely inadequate . . ." The witness also read from the committee's report a recommendation that the first consideration in any long-range school program in the county should be given to the improvement of Negro school facilities.

Chapman also cited excerpts from annual reports made by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction showing that the value of white school property in King George in the school year 1943-44 was $236,000, while Negro school property in the county in the same year was listed as $18,000.

500 Exhibits Shown in Fair At Damascus

Over 500 exhibits of poultry, grain, and homemade foods were shown at the Damascus, Md., High School community fair.

The all-day fair was sponsored by the Damascus chapters of the Future Farmers and Future Homemakers of America. School officials estimated that almost 2000 people attended Thursday including students from nearby high schools.

Though adults were among the entrants, nearly all of the $300 in prize money was carried off by high school students. The prizes were donated to the groups by local farmers and community merchants.

W. W. Miles of the Future Farmers of America and Miss Adel Seed of the Future Homemakers, both members of the Damascus faculty, supervised the event.

Winners in the day's events were: potato champion, Harold Mullinix; hay, Robert Hilton; male poultry, Douglas King; female poultry, Bruce Cummings; trio of chickens, Alfred Poole; trio of ducks, Henry Hilton; bantams, Raymond Moxley; needle work, Connie Mullinix; baking, Barbara Seaton; canning, Mary Hartley; pair of ducks, Herbert King; jellies, Maud Sitzer; preserves, Roberta Nichols; pickles, Marilyn Olans; hobbies, Mrs. Paul Taylor, and sewing, Mrs. Ida Thompson, all of the Damascus area.

College Park Club Offers Book Week Programs

The Progress Club of College Park, Md., will present two programs in honor of Book Week. Today they will sponsor a book fair at 10 a. m. at the Episcopal Parish House, Dartmouth ave., including a story hour and movies for children.

Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, also at the Parish House, they will hold an evening of book reviews and music. Both events are under the direction of Mrs. D. S. Brinkley, fine arts chairman.

Hospital Levy Backed

Luray, Va., Nov. 14.—Page County residents voted in favor of a levy for a new hospital building in an unofficial poll election day, it was announced here yesterday. In a total 2796 vote, 1691 approved the proposal. The communities of Leakesville, Rattlesburg, Springfield and Stony Man voted against the levy.

Lighting Urged For More Eggs

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—Use of artificial lighting in hen houses will mean many extra eggs during fall and winter months when prices are highest, a Virginia Agricultural Extension Service specialist said today.

Associate poultry husbandman A. L. Dean explained that the purpose of lights is to extend artificially the number of daylight hours during short fall and winter days.

Tests have shown, Dean said, that 13 hours of light are necessary for maximum production, and that electric lights should be used whenever the number of daylight hours in any 24 drops below 13.

Any increase above 13 hours does not bring enough increase in egg production to warrant the extra expense, he added.

Md. Prepares Own Show for Freedom Train

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—Maryland will put on its own historical show, including four copies of the State constitutions when the freedom train arrives November 25.

The treasured documents were brough here today by State police from the Maryland Hall of Records for display at the Baltimore Museum of Art, the Enoch Pratt and the Johns Hopkins University libraries.

Dr. Morris L. Radoff, State archivist, said the chief item of exhibit would be what is believed to be the "original draft of the State constitution of 1776." This has never been shown before publicly.

It was discovered among papers formerly held by Maryland Historical Society. Radoff said apparently "fair copies" of the original were sent to the counties, but a true copy of the original has never been found.

"Maryland is one of the few States which doesn't have its original constitution," he commented. The original was drawn by a convention which sat between September 6 and November 11, 1776.

Along with this draft to be displayed at the museum will be original copies of the State constitutions of 1851, 1864 and 1867.

Also brought here today were papers signed by George Washington which will be shown at the Pratt Library. Another group of papers gained by Thomas Jefferson will be displayed at the university library.

Drunk Drivers Lead List in Va. Accidents

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—Drunken driving as a contributing factor in automobile accidents has more than doubled since 1933, last full year of prohibition in Virginia, and has almost tripled fatal accidents, records of State Police disclosed today.

A comparison shows that in 1933 drunkenness was accounted a factor in 5.1 per cent of all automobile accidents reported, and was held responsible in 7.9 per cent of all automobile accidents resulting in fatalities.

For the first six months of 1947 the drunk driver is charged with blame in 11.2 per cent of all accidents on the highway and for more than a fifth—21.5 per cent—of all fatal accidents.

Leesburg Fiscal Records Approved

Richmond, Va., Nov 14 (AP).—State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett today approved the fiscal records of the town of Leesburg for 1946-47, and noted that the locality spent more than it took in during the period.

In a report transmitted to Governor Tuck, the auditor reported total revenues of $44,860 and expenditures of $58,510. The balance in the town's fund of unappropriated surplus dropped from $15,527 at the end of the 1945-46 fiscal year to $1577. Total assessed property of $1,133,500 was at a record high, as was the tax levy of $9313 for the year.

Leesburg's auditor treasurer, Roscoe B. Rhoads was praised for the "exceptionally neat and accurate manner" in which his records were prepared.

Action Needed

Md. Pollution Board Warns Canneries

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission today warned the approximately 300 canneries in Maryland to "take immediate steps" to control waste products which pollute State waters.

The commission, meeting here at the State Health Department office, unanimously approved the draft of a letter to be sent to each cannery operator in the State.

The letter, signed by Paul W. McKee, executive secretary, warns canners:

"It is suggested that if you have waste discharge to a stream or other body of water which is detrimental to fish life, creates a nuisance or prevents the reasonable use of that water by other people, you take immediate steps to correct this condition before the 1948 canning season."

Commission members indicated that about 75 per cent of complaints regarding pollution of State waters referred to cannery operations.

The commission also adopted two pollution regulations; to be effective December 14.

One prohibits the discharge of oil from vessels in State waters, except in emergencies.

The other prohibits any person from discharging garbage in any State waters.

The commission voted 3-2 to deny reporters the right "to quote personal opinions and statements of commission members unless authorized."

Archbishop John McNicholas Reelected NCWC Chairman

Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati yesterday was reelected chairman of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Bishop Michael J. Ready of Columbus, general secretary of the NCWC prior to his designation as bishop, was named episcopal chairman of the press department by election of the Catholic bishops of the United States who have just completed a three-day session here. A total of 136 members of the Catholic hierarchy attended the sessions.

Pope Pius XIII, in a message to Archbishop McNicholas, praised the bishops for making "so valued a contribution to our efforts to bring relief to the most needy among the multitudes throughout the world, especially our beloved little children still suffering from the consequences of war."

Elected to the administrative board in addition to Archbishop McNicholas and Bishop Ready are Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, vice chairman of the board and Episcopal chairman of the NCWC youth department; Bishop John Mark Gannon of Erie, treasurer; Bishop John F. Noll of Fort Wayne, secretary; Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio, Episcopal chairman of the department of lay organizations; Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis, Episcopal chairman of the department of Catholic action study; Archbishop James H. Ryan of Omaha, Episcopal chairman of the department of education; Bishop Karl J. Alter of Toledo, Episcopal chairman of the department of social action; Bishop Emmet M. Walsh of Charleston, Episcopal chairman of the legal department; Bishop Michael J. Ready of Columbus, Episcopal chairman of the press department.

The following members of the hierarchy were invited to serve as assistant bishops:

Bishop Francis P. Keough, assistant bishop to the chairman of the board; Bishop William D. O'Brien of Chicago, assistant treasurer; Bishop John F. O'Hara, C. S. C., of Buffalo, assistant bishop of the department of Catholic action study; Bishop Richard O. Gerow of Natchez, assistant bishop of the youth department; Bishop Thomas K. Gorman of Reno, assistant bishop of the press department; Bishop Matthew Francis Brady of Manchester, assistant bishop of the department of lay organizations; Bishop Bryan J. McEntegart of Ogdensburg, assistant bishop of the legal department; Bishop Charles Hubert LeBlond of St. Joseph, Mo., assistant bishop of the department of social action, and Bishop William A. Scully, coadjutor of Albany, assistant bishop of the department of education.

Msgr. Howard J. Carroll was again named general secretary of the NCWC. The Rev. Paul F. Tanner was again chosen assistant general secretary.

Rev., Mrs. Keene To Mark 50 Years Of Married Life

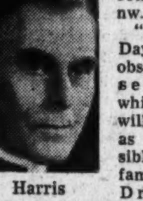
The Rev. and Mrs. William D. Keene will mark their golden wedding anniversary Monday.

Mr. Keene, who retired from the active Methodist ministry in 1940 after 45 years' service, is supply pastor for Gorsuch Church, 4th and L sts. sw. He also has been supply minister for Marvin Memorial Church, Four Corners, Md.; Lincoln Road and Rosedale Churches here.

No formal observance of the anniversary will be held because of the recent death of a son—the late Clark Keene, who was vice president of the Oles Envelope Co. in Baltimore. Before Methodist Unification in April, 1939, the Rev. Mr. Keene served Southern Methodist pulpits in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District, including the former Calvary (later renamed Aldersgate) Church in Georgetown, since merged into the St. Luke Methodist Church. The Keenes have four sons and a daughter living.

Former Chaplain Of Senate to Mark 23d Anniversary

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, former Senate chaplain, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will commemorate the 23d anniversary of his ministry at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw.



Harris

"Loyalty Day" will be observed at the services, at which members will be urged—as far as possible—to sit in family groups. Dr. Harris' theme will be "When I Came Unto You." Dr. Harris was pastor of Grace Methodist Church, New York City, for six years before coming here in 1924.

Dr. Allen E. Claxton, pastor of New York City's Broadway Temple Methodist Church, will address a service tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Foundry Church, under auspices of the National Stewardship Institute. The American University Chorus will sing.

Truman Backs Daily Bible Reading Plan

President Harry S. Truman has indorsed the American Bible Society's Thanksgiving to Christmas Daily Bible Reading program, it was announced last night by Dr. William L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington City Bible Society.

Dr. Darby said several hundred thousand leaflets with the suggested daily readings listed have been distributed throughout the world.

"The Bible is the book our fathers and mothers knew," the President said in part. "I hope that the observance of Bible Sunday on December 14 and the daily reading of the Scriptures from Thanksgiving to Christmas will inspire the present generation to return to the practice of their forebears. As we prepare to go forward with the tasks which lie ahead we shall find strength and courage if we gird ourselves with 'the Sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God'."

Bazaars Planned By Four Churches

Four churches will sponsor bazaars today and in the coming week.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of Grace Methodist Church, New Hampshire and Kentland aves., Takoma Park, will hold its annual bazaar and silver tea there from 1 p. m. to 5 today. Mrs. Nelson Davis is chairman.

The Gamma Sigmas of Francis Asbury Methodist Church, 3146 16th st. nw., will sponsor its bazaar Thursday and Friday from 4 p. m. to 9 p. m., with a turkey dinner served Thursday from 5 to 7 p. m. Light refreshments will be sold Friday. Mrs. B. W. Mills is general chairman of the bazaar, and Mrs. Ralph Michel, of the dinner.

The annual Christmas bazaar of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., will be held there Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Yule gifts will be sold. For shoppers' convenience, a light lunch will be served at noon; tea from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. and a turkey dinner from 5 p. m. to 7 p. m. A nursery will be kept open from 10 a. m. to 7 p. m.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut ave. and Everett st. nw., will hold its annual bazaar and turkey dinner Wednesday. The bazaar will open at 2 p. m. and the dinner from 5 p. m. to 7 p. m.

Presbyterian Minister-Elect Was Born and Reared in China

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

The Rev. William H. Kepler, pastor-elect of Northminster Presbyterian Church in Shepherd Park, spent the first 16 years of his life in China, where seven of his relatives were missionaries.

His father was for 20 years the general secretary of the Church of Christ in China, an organization comparable to the Federal Council of Churches in America.

After receiving his early education at home under the guidance of his missionary-mother, young Kepler studied at American schools in Shanghai, Nanking and Kuling. He graduated from Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy in 1930, and subsequently from Wooster (Ohio) College and Princeton Theological Seminary. Before coming to his present pulpit of the Catonsville (Md.) Presbyterian Church, he was assistant pastor of Philadelphia's Second Presbyterian Church.

In addition to his parents, others in his family who were missionaries included his grandparents, two older brothers and a sister. He has been chairman of foreign missions for the Baltimore Presbytery since 1942. He will be installed as pastor of Northminster Church, Alaska ave. and Kalmia rd. nw., January 2, 1948.

ZABAWA WAS CHAPLAIN'S ASSISTANT

Jule Zabawa, new minister of music at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol st., was a chaplain's assistant in World War II. In that capacity, he was in charge of musical organizations and also sang, including a command performance in England for the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester. He served with the Third Armored Division in France, Belgium and Germany. He was former soloist and assistant director of the famous St. Olaf Choir and once served as baritone soloist in historic Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims, New York City, founded by the noted Henry Ward Beecher. At Reformation Church he has organized a new treble choir of high school students and also a male chorus. He has studied voice under a number of eminent teachers.

A number of faculty-members of Catholic University will participate in the 10th annual reunion of the Alumni Association and in the forum at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City, beginning November 22. They will include the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, university rector; Dr. Alphonse H. Clemens, associate professor of sociology; Dr. William J. McDonald, associate professor of philosophy, and Dr. Mary E. Walsh, assistant professor of sociology.

Battley Named Head of Paint Association

By S. Oliver Goodman

Joseph F. Battley, after 30 years of Government service, yesterday was elected president of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, Inc. He succeeds Ernest T. Trigg, who retired after 14 years as president of the association to become its chairman.

Battley

Battley retired last year as a brigadier general after a notable career in the Army and Government service. Born in 1893 in Norfolk, Va., he entered Federal service with the Virginia National Guard in 1917.

Since World War I, his activities in the Army have all been of an administrative and executive nature, including production, procurement and distribution of chemical war supplies, industrial mobilization planning duties and responsible activities in Selective Service and labor matters.

He became known to the paint industry when he was loaned by the Army to the National Recovery Administration in 1933, serving as administrator of the NRA's chemical division. In that capacity he was administrator of the paint code.

Battley lives at 2644 South Lynn st., Arlington, Va., and his office is in the paint association's headquarters at 1500 Rhode Island ave. nw. Before his election yesterday at a session in Atlantic City, N. J., Battley was assistant to the association's president since May, 1947.

ODD LOTS: Wilhelm & Co. of Washington has been admitted to membership in National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. . . Statistical position of Portland cement industry and its outlook for next five years are outlined in latest publication of Axe-Houghton Economic Studies . . . Internal Revenue Bureau granted credits and refunds totaling $941,889 to Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad for overassessments of taxes for 1941 through 1944 . . . Government bonds, which have dropped sharply in the past week, displayed more stability yesterday. International Bank obligations also steadied with the long-term 3s higher at 98 24/32 and the short-term 2¼s up 2/32 at 98 10/32 bid . . . United Engineering & Foundry Co. announced booking of 20-million-dollar order for rolling mill equipment for the British steel expansion program.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the week ended November 8 rose 6 per cent over the same 1946 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. For the four weeks ended November 8 local dollar volume was 5 per cent higher. Regionally, store sales were up 2 per cent for the week and a like amount for the four-week period.

EARNINGS: Columbia Gas & Electric Corp. reported net income of $16,628,570 for 12 months ended September 30, equal to $1.36 a common share, compared with $14,261,671 or $1.17 a share in same 1946 period. Other earnings statements yesterday included:

Select Issues Turn Upward In Slow Deals

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The downturn in the stock market was stemmed selectively today although many leaders continued to operate in the losing column.

Weekend short covering by professionals, in addition to other timid buying, was based on the thought that the recent drop of the averages to a low since late September called for a technical rally.

Prices eased at the start and stiffened at the end of the first hour with dealings quickening for a brief interval. Subsequent slowdowns appeared and top marks running to 3 points or so—there were isolated wider jumps—failed to hold in most cases. Transfers of 780,000 shares compared with 790,000 the day before.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Fri.	Thurs.
Advances	334	191
Declines	388	590
Unchanged	254	208
Total issues	976	989

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was up .2 of a point at 64.4 due to the presence in the index of more prominent gainers.

Recommendation of the ICC against the Santa Fe entering St. Louis buoyed stocks of roads already serving that city. Alleghany Corp. prior preferred was up 4 at 75, Nickel Plate 1⅞ at 35⅞ and Frisco Railway common ½ at 30⅛. Other carriers maintained their equilibrium in the face of a wage boost for the trainmen's brotherhood.

Treasury to Raise Short-Term Rate

The Treasury said yesterday it will boost the interest rate on an issue of short-term securities to be issued next month.

The issue will bear interest of 1⅛ per cent and will mature in 13 months, the treasury said. It will be a "note" issue.

The new issue will be offered in exchange to holders of $3,280,792,000 in certificates of indebtedness maturing December 1 and $701,072,900 in nine-year Treasury bonds maturing December 15.

The maturing certificates, which are one-year paper, carry interest of only seven-eighths per cent. The maturing bonds bear 2 per cent interest.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Rain nearly washed away $3 wheat on the Board of Trade today. The Southwest received needed moisture and all grains responded by dropping, the new crop wheat contracts losing the most.

December wheat finished on a split quotation at 2.99¾@3.00, after being down to $2.99. That compared with a high of $3.03½ yesterday. Wheat lost 2¼ to 4½. Corn was 1¼ to 2⅝ down, December 2.35½@2.34¾, and oats 1 cent lower to ½ higher, December 1.15¾@1.16.

In the important western Kansas wheat area rain was reported from Garden City and Dodge City. Liberal, Kans., in southwest Kansas just above the Oklahoma panhandle border, received snow. Amarillo, in the Texas panhandle, and Guymon, in the Oklahoma panhandle, had rain.

These cities are located in the areas which have been experiencing the worst part of the drought.

All of this was enough to bring in some fairly aggressive selling, despite the fact that the amount of moisture was not always known, and many traders felt it was insufficient in view of the prolonged dry spell. Some analysts thought it was so late now that most of the damage to the 1948 winter wheat crop had been done.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 90 cents a bale higher to 5 lower in quiet trading today. Uncertainty over the foreign aid and domestic price control program discouraged trading activity.

Mill buying and Western demand accounted for limited support in the market, which was offset by hedging and scattered liquidation.

Colsten E. Warne

Food Board's Fund Source Questioned

President Truman's Citizens Food Committee was asked yesterday by a congressional committee to explain how and where it got funds to operate.

Chairman Hoffman (R., Mich.) of the House Executive Expenditures Committee said he had received a complaint that $500,000 of funds appropriated for Greek-Turkish aid were being used for the purpose.

The Food Committee official admitted that was true, but the State Department disagreed.

The State Department said it allotted the funds to the Food Committee at Mr. Truman's request, but said they came from the 532 million dollars appropriated last May for emergency relief to six European countries. The food-conservation drive organized by the Food Committee is to make food available for those countries.

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, said the Comptroller General had approved the transfer.

A spokesman for the committee headed by Charles Luckman said it was not expected more than $250,000 would be used. And that, he explained, would go for office supplies, clerical help and travel expenses and not for radio or periodical advertising or salaries for the committee and its staff.

At Boston yesterday Luckman said there would be a food shortage "for a long time to come" and added there was need for "some long-term type of food-conservation plan." He said the long-term problem was under study by his committee.

Poultrymen, who promised to cut chick production in exchange for abandonment of poultryless Thursdays, met at Philadelphia to discuss means of meeting their commitment. They hope to save 56 million bushels of grain which normally would be fed to growing fowl.

Meat, Poultry Prices Show Steady Rise

No matter what meat or poultry you want for dinner, it probably went up in price this week.

Beef prices rose 2 cents a pound at wholesale yesterday and pork continued a steady price rise begun two weeks ago, while chicken and turkey moved in the same direction. Only lamb and veal prices were reported at previous levels.

Sidney Kolker, head of the wholesale food division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said that despite the price rises, the market for meats was good, partly because of the arrival of cooler weather, which usually stimulates meat sales.

The main reason for the price rises, wholesalers agreed, was consumer demand. Pork normally should be dropping in price, since the hog slaughtering season is under way, but an abnormal demand has forced the recently lowered prices upward, Kolker said.

The same situation is true for chickens. Max Bressler, head of the poultry division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said chicken prices rose 4 to 5 cents in the past two weeks, although poultrymen have been complaining for several weeks about oversupply.

He said fryers moved from 38 to 42, roasters from 39 to 44, because of improved demand, while broilers dropped from 44 to 41 cents a pound, because of a reduction in demand for lightweight birds.

Turkeys are arriving in steadily increasing lots, Bressler said, so that an adequate supply to meet Thanksgiving Day demands is anticipated. As the holiday approaches, demand has been increasing and prices were raised a cent or more a pound this week.

Yesterday afternoon officials of the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection delivered to the White House the signatures of 3000 District persons, attached to large facsimiles of telegrams, asking President Truman to move for the restoration of rationing and price control of foods.

In Virginia, the index of prices received by farmers rose 10 points during September, reaching 286 or 6 points higher than the previous all-time high registered last March, Dr. Harry M. Love, Virginia Tech agricultural economist, reported yesterday.

Living Cost Reports Show Partisanship

The shape of partisan differences over means of reducing the cost of living appeared to be forecast yesterday in two reports before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee.

One report, submitted by Republican members of a subcommittee headed by Representative Bender (R., Ohio), blamed high living costs almost exclusively on exports for foreign aid. This report was sent back to the subcommittee after Democrats had complained it was "isolationist" and "partisan."

The other, submitted by a second subcommittee under chairmanship of Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), proposed a 12-point program which included voluntary rationing, a longer work week and reduction of income taxes by increasing dependency exemptions.

Different Areas Surveyed

The Bender Subcommittee report was based on hearings throughout the Midwest, while the Flanders Subcommittee investigated conditions and sentiment in the East. A third report, by a subcommittee which has toured the Far Western States, will be submitted next week.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, said he hoped to begin hearings on Administration proposals for price reduction by next Wednesday and complete them in two or three weeks. In an effort to speed matters, the Senate and House Banking Committees, which can take legislative action not possible to Taft's committee, will sit with it during hearings.

Taft would not venture to predict, however, whether Administration proposals can be acted upon during the special session which convenes Monday.

The Flanders subcommittee, in urging voluntary rationing as a means of meeting present high prices, added the suggestion that a ration law be prepared for use should that expedient fail. The report pointed out that the low-income consumer was "already being involuntary rationed" by high prices and suggested that high-income buyers cut down on purchases of meat, butter, eggs and dairy products.

Meat Rationing Inevitable

Flanders told reporters he felt that there was "no escape from meat rationing." As for rationing of butter and eggs, he said, "I don't feel so sure about them, but believe they will have to be rationed too."

He said rationing would be "simpler" than price control and, by artificially lessening demand, would create a situation in which supply would exceed demand, thereby lowering prices.

The subcommittee suggested the work week be increased beyond 40 hours to increase production. The present law does not prohibit a work week longer than 40 hours, but requires that overtime be paid beyond that time.

Sharp disagreement between the Flanders and Bender reports came in recommendations on reduced taxation. While the Bender report urged over-all income tax reductions of 5 to 10 million dollars, the Flanders subcommittee suggested raising exemptions for dependents. The latter proposal also runs counter to the policies of Taft, who has supported across-the-board reductions.

In addition to Flanders, members of the Eastern Subcommittee were Senators Baldwin (R., Conn.) and Myers (D., Pa.), and Representatives Rich (R., Pa.), Kilburn (R., N. Y.), and Hart (D., N. J.). All signed the report in contrast to the action of all Democrats and one Republican in declining to sign the Bender report.

Retail Food Prices Hit Record Highs

Retail food prices in September hit a record high, sending the cost of living up another two per cent for moderate-income families, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

Preliminary estimates placed the consumers' price index at a peak of about 164 per cent of the 1935-39 average.

The September index is 12 per cent higher than a year ago, 23 per cent above June, 1946, when most OPA controls were abandoned, and 66 per cent over the August, 1939 level.

D. C. Lobbyist Loses Circuit Court Appeal

New York, Nov. 14 (NYHT).—Conviction of John Porter Monroe, Washington lobbyist of "the Big Red House on R st.," who was fined $100,000 and sentenced to two years in jail on April 18, 1946, for black-market operations in textiles, was unanimously upheld today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Judge Learned Hand wrote the opinion, in which Judges Clark and Thomas W. Swan concurred.

Lavish entertainment by Monroe, of Government officials at his Washington home led to a congressional investigation in 1943. No evidence of criminal conduct was then found against him.

Central Meets McKinley for Interhigh Title November 28; Justice-Gambino Duel Will Pack in Crowd of 31,000 Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE SPLIT T-formation that Maryland has used to shake Lu Gambino loose all season will be on display against Carolina's single wing today at Griffith Stadium, and it could be described, I guess, as the T-formation's New Look.

POVICH

It's the old T, with the linemen abandoning their shoulder-to-shoulder position on offense and lining up with a couple of feet of daylight, or more, between the guards, tackles and ends. It's designed, of course, to split the defenses as well, and the whole idea is of Missouri origin. Among the coaches it's better known as the Don Faurot T.

Faurot made the Split-T go sensationally at Missouri before the war, at a time when the Shaughnessy T was supposed to be the vogue and the cure-all for all losing teams. But it was while Faurot was in the Navy that he did the biggest indoctrination job of any football stylist.

He was one of the 2200 coaches in Tom Hamilton's preflight training program and so smitten was Hamilton with the efficacy of the Split-T that it became gospel among Navy football coaches. Faurot not only retained his rugged individualism, a tough trick in the Navy, but he sold Hamilton's 2200 coaches on his style with a See-Here-Mr. Navy approach.

IT'S NO COINCIDENCE that Maryland is using the Split-T this season. Jim Tatum was one of those 2200 Navy coaches during the war. Tatum installed the Split-T at Oklahoma last year, with success.

Right now, all football is divided into three styles of play—the single wing, the Shaughnessy T, and the Faurot T. Completely abandoned is the once famous box formation of the late Knute Rockne. And unending are the debates between the devotees of the T and the single wing. It's easy to prove the case of both. Notre Dame is a T team, Michigan uses the single wing.

Among the pros they're cleft down the middle, too. Last year in the championship play-off it was the Bears with their version of the T, against the Giants with Steve Owen stoutly clinging to the single wing. Like Owen, Coach Ray Flaherty of the New York Yankees has never felt the urge to abandon the single wing for the supposed wonders of the T.

THE SINGLE WING is the durable gift of Pop Warner to football, and out on the Pacific Coast where he lives he holds a fierce pride in the style he originated. He scoffs at the T-formation, and actually refuses to watch a football game unless at least one of the teams is using the single wing. It's not the mark of a bitter old man. Warner simply says, "The T is uninteresting."

The fans who used to thrill at the intricacies of the T, now get a bigger wallop, I think, out of the power plays of the single wing, plus the sweeps with blockers pulling out of the line to lead the interference. For the fans, it's easier to follow the ball on the direct pass from center, in contrast to the manipulations of the T quarterback. The T-formation play may be half over before the customers know who has the ball.

THE T-FORMATION I like to watch best is Greasy Neale's T as played by the Philadelphia Eagles. Neale makes the T go best on plays to the outside, with wide hand-offs and flip-outs, in contrast to the inside power plays of the Bears who are best at that art. I'd say Neale's outside plays and the sweep runs from the single wing have the most customer appeal.

I haven't noted any improvement in the Redskins since they abandoned Ray Flaherty's single wing in favor of Shaughnessy's T. The Redskins are not the thrill-team they used to be, despite the continued presence of Sammy Baugh. In fact, the Redskins' T is the least deceptive T-formation in the pro league, I'd say.

Other T quarterbacks like Sid Luckman and Tommy Thompson move with the ball, either to shovel-pass or lateral otherwise, but not the Redskins' quarterback. He's virtually stationary, except when he's passing. Sometimes it's very effective, but often times you'd have to call it pretty dull.

Penn Eager to Get at Army; Navy Still Has Hopes of Upset

Penn State Risks Unbeaten Record

By The Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—Penn State, seeking its first perfect football season since 1912, brings an undefeated and untied football team to Baltimore Stadium tomorrow to meet an oft-beaten Navy which most "experts" pick to pull an upset.

Navy almost kayoed favored Georgia Tech last week, and the Middies are given a good chance to knock off the Nittany Lions before an expected crowd of 35,000.

The weatherman says rain will start falling about noon tomorrow, which could have a decided effect on the outcome. Penn State had trouble defeating Temple, 7-0, in the mud last week.

Penn State with seven straight wins has only Pitt after Navy, and would rate a top bowl bid with a string of nine victories.

This will be the last game for Navy until its "big one" with Army in Philadelphia, November 29, and the Midshipmen could stand a morale boost.

Coach Bob Higgins brings almost the same team to Baltimore which beat Navy, 12-7, in Annapolis last year.

Coach Tom Hamilton is worried about the condition of Fullback Bill Hawkins and Halfback Pete Williams, who have been out with injuries. He expects both to be in uniform, but isn't certain how much they will play.

Probable line-ups: (Kickoff 2 p. m. EST).

Quakers Favorites 1st Time in 4 Years

Philadelphia, Nov. 14 (AP).—Pennsylvania's vengeful and fighting mad football team, humiliated three straight years by Army, rules a seven-point favorite to crown its all-winning record tomorrow with a victory over the Black Knights in the Nation's top gridiron clash.

Coach George Munger walked his worried way around the ivy-draped Penn campus and didn't change his lined expression when he said "this is the tough one, but I think we can win it."

The weatherman said it would be cold and hinted it might rain tomorrow, but even a blizzard wouldn't leave any vacant seats in the huge Penn horseshoe which seats 78,205. The game has been a sellout since September.

Penn Seniors Eager

What most of the Penn team members recall are 1944, 1945 and 1946 football dates with the West Pointers. Contests which the Red and Blue lost by 62-7, 61-0 and 34-7 scores.

Seven in Penn's starting lineup will be seniors and they'll be playing Army for the last time. "This is the one they want," Munger said.

Led by its left-right offensive punch, Skippy Minisi and Bob Deuber, Penn has smacked down six foes this season. As a matter of fact, the Red and Blue has not lost a football game since it bowed to Army last year.

Deuber, who suffered a sprained ankle in last week's 19-7 win over previously unbeaten Virginia, is able to run again but whether the fleet Bridgeton, N. J., halfback will be at top form tomorrow is uncertain.

Evans to Fill In

In his spot in Penn's tailback position, Bob Evans will be the starter, although Al Sica and Don Schneider also are available. Munger said he believes Evans has improved vastly over last year and he's counting heavily on the 23-year-old Norristown, Pa., halfback.

Army will rely on the same backfield combination which started against Notre Dame. Arnold Galiffa will be at quarterback with Bobby Stuart and Win Scott at halves and Rowan at full.

Maryland Is 14-Point Underdog Against N. C.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The prospect of an all-out offensive duel between Lu Gambino and Charlie Justice has caught the fancy of Washington's football population and upward of 31,000 fans will be in Griffith Stadium today to see the heralded clash between North Carolina and Maryland.

Game time is 2 p. m. and the throng will establish a new record for attendance at a college game in Washington.

Both Southern Conference teams will be making their first and only appearance of the season in Washington, but neither needs much of an introduction.

With virtually the same personnel that could win only three games last year, but under a complete new coaching setup, the neighboring Terps have been responsible for the greatest outburst of collegiate football enthusiasm witnessed here in years.

Tatum in Spotlight, Too

The spotlighted figures of the revitalized Maryland club are its head coach, Jim Tatum, forever predicting calamity for his club which has been beaten only by Duke in seven games, and Lu (Bambino) Gambino, a touchdown maker with only one equal in the country. Gambino has sprinted across enemy goal lines 14 times to share the Nation's scoring lead at 84 points with Darwin Horn of Tiny Peppardine College, Calif.

Opposing the pride and joy of the District will be a power-laden Tarheel delegation which has snapped back from defeats by Texas and Wake Forest to become one of the Nation's most potent aggregations.

Three-deep in every position and alternating offensive and defensive teams in the manner of pros, the Tarheels still look to their 165-pound tailback, talented,

3000 Tickets to Go On Sale at 9 Today

There are more than 3000 tickets still available for today's North Carolina-Maryland football game at Griffith Stadium.

Public sale of the tickets starts at 9 a. m. today at the ball park box office. The tickets will be on sale at Griffith Stadium only and purchasers are advised to be on hand early.

Lions Finally Win, 4 to 1

Joe Ciuman and Bob Walton decided that the Washington Lions' losing streak, which had reached six straight games, had better come to an end, so they took over and the Lions won, 4-1, over the Springfield Indians last night at Uline Arena.

Ciuman and Walton handled all of the winners' scoring. Joe got a pair of goals in th esecond stanza and Bob tallied his singly in the second and third.

Ciuman Scores

Ciuman got the Lions off to a good start early in the second period as he took a pass from Johnny Carr-Harris, faked Springfield goalie Floyd Perras out of position and flipped the rubber into the empty cage.

A minute later, Washington wing Bob Bolton beat Perras from point-blank range after receiving the puck on a pass from Don Slater.

Springfield tried hard to come back after this goal, and in a scuffle around the Lion net, Slater crashed into one of the uprights while traveling at terrific speed and was incapacitated for a couple of minutes. He was not seriously injured, however, being able to skate off under his own power.

Indians Tally

The Indians finally scored at 11:15 as Big Vic Lofvendahl, burly defenseman, fired a waist-high screen shot from 30 feet out to beat Lion goal tender Gordie Bell.

At 18:46 of the period, Ciuman notched his second goal with Carr-Harris again feeding him a pass near the Springfield net. Ciuman poked in a fast shot to up the Lion lead to 3-1 after two periods of play.

Work to Start At Ocean Downs

Taylorsville, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Construction is slated to start near here Monday on a $500,000 harness racing plant its sponsors hope to have completed in time for a 20-day meeting next summer. The track will be operated by the Ocean Downs Racing Association. The Maryland General Assembly authorized 100 days of harness racing with pari-mutuel betting annually at its 1947 regular session.

Ocean Downs track will be built 3½ miles west of Ocean City on the main highway to Salisbury.

HE'S A PASSER AND PLUNGER, TOO—One of the key men of North Carolina's single wing offense is the fellow doing the passing here, Fullback Walt Pupa. Pupa, a 200-pound line bustin' fullback, also doubles as a passer, helping Charlie Justice with that phase of the Carolina offense. Griffith Stadium fans will see him in action today when the Tarheels meet Maryland at 2 p. m. A crowd of over 31,000 will be on hand for the fracas

Tech Rolls Over Coolidge, 39-0; Central Has Trouble But Wins

Vikings Held 7-7 At Half by Western

By Roger Wolbast
Post Reporter

Central's Vikings remained undefeated in the interhigh standings by pounding out a 21-7 victory over a valiant Western team before 2500 fans yesterday at Western Stadium.

It was Central's sixth consecutive interhigh triumph and Western's fourth defeat against a win and a tie. The victory left Central tied with Tech with a 6-0 record.

OTHER HIGH SCHOOL GAME ON PAGE 16

Stung by Coach Jan Jankowski's silent treatment during the half-time intermission, after being held to a 7-7 deadlock by the outweighed Westerners, Central scored in five minutes of the third quarter.

Pantos Scores One

Jimmy Pantos, the Vikings' triple-threat star, put Central ahead single-handedly. First he kicked out of bounds on the Western 5-yard line, then after a weak Western kick out, he raced 31 yards on a cut back over tackle for a touchdown.

Bill Denikos added the second of his three extra points, and the Vikings were never headed again.

Stopped cold by Westerns' line for the remainder of the second half. Central took advantage of a blocked kick to score the clincher with a minute remaining in the game. Hal Sponsler blocked Norm Wacker's punt and Bob Sasko recovered for the Vikings on the Western 25. Pantos and Keith lugged the ball to the 4 and Dale Leathery plunged over.

Central Hangs On

Western wasn't through yet, though. On the game's last play, Don Strain passed to Jack Leadbetter from his own 40 and the stocky Western star raced 54 yards to the Central 6 as the gun ended the game.

Central opened the scoring in the first quarter, driving 54 yards

Bugs Thompson Paces Trainer Win

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

McKinley Tech's Trainers clinched an interhigh championship playoff berth by smothering Calvin Coolidge, defending titleholder, 39-0, before 3000 fans yesterday at Central Stadium.

The Trainers, who stalked through their six-game league season undefeated, untied and unscored upon, earned the right to meet unbeaten Central in the championship classic November 28.

Tech	6	0	0	Eastern	3	4	0
Central	6	0	0	Western	1	4	1
Anacostia	3	2	1	Wilson	1	6	0
Coolidge	3	3	0	Roosevelt	0	6	0

The Trainers were a vengeful lot yesterday. Seared in their minds was the 18-6 licking they took from Coolidge in last year's championship game. Yesterday they handed the Colts their worst defeat in seven years of Interhigh competition.

Five of the Tech heroes were veterans of that 1946 title game. The big star was Halfback Bugs Thompson, who during the first 15 minutes of play, was given the ball six times, and raced to three touchdowns, 12, 68 and 66 yards.

He received plenty of help from Ends Jim McCauley and Glenn Smith, Center Bob Bell and Halfback Flea Fletcher, who all turned in top performances.

It was McCauley who tallied Tech's fourth touchdown late in the second quarter on a reverse and end-around play. Mel Kogod and Fletcher handled the ball first, and then gave it to McCauley who sprinted and dodged 72 yards for the score.

Bill Werber, jr., left-handed passing son of the former major league third baseman, tossed 15 yards to Fletcher, who galloped 12 more for the fifth Trainer score in the third period.

The Tech third-string added insult to the Coolidge injury on the last play of the game. The Colts had passed their way to the Trainer 15, when Bobby Rohr faded to toss again. Tech's two sophomore ends, Ray Fox and Francis Hobbs, charged in. Fox batted Rohr's pass into the air on the 30, and Hobbs scooped it in on the fly to race 70 yards through a clear field for a touchdown.

Eddie Herbert placekicked the conversions after the first two touchdowns, and a pass from Kogod to McCauley after the fifth touchdown also clicked.

The three touchdown runs of Thompson were the high points of the game. He received excellent blocking from Smith, Bell and Fletcher until he reached the line. But after that, he showed tricky deception and change of pace as he sped through the Coolidge secondary.

Gallaudet Opens and Closes Its Football Season Today

GALLAUDET, once a power in collegiate football here, returns to the gridiron today for the first time in 10 years.

The Blue Bisons, coached by Tom Clayton, former University of Maryland center, play Montgomery Junior College, 2 p. m., on the Bethesda Recreation Field.

It's the only game on the 1947 slate for the school for the deaf. And it wouldn't have been there if 35 candidates for the 1948 Gallaudet team hadn't begged their coach to find them at least one opponent this season.

Gallaudet had planned to resume football with a six-game Mason-Dixon Conference schedule next year. So five weeks ago, Clayton, the wrestling coach, issued a call for candidates to see the kind of material he'd have to work with.

The candidates worked hard and finally induced their coach to book the game with Montgomery, which they learned had an open date.

Clayton discovered he has pretty fair material. Four of his men were named to the high school All-America team for the deaf. End Truch Saunders of North Carolina, Guard Frank Turk of Minnesota, Fullback Les Massey of Indiana and Halfback Marv Tuttle of North Carolina.

The Blue Bisons will strike from the single wing. Their quarterback, Don Bradford, hand-signals the plays in the huddle, and the players count to themselves after they line up.

Incidentally, Athletic Director Bill McClure claims that the huddle was invented by Gallaudet in its first game in 1882. The opposing team, which happened to be Navy, called its signals by shouting meaningless sentences. Other teams later picked up the huddle idea after Gallaudet beat the Middies in that first game, 16-0.

In subsequent years, the Bisons whipped all the District schools as well as Virginia, Wake Forest and VPI.

They never had an undefeated season, but in 1901 they lost only two out of eight games, including, among their victims once-mighty Carlisle, Georgetown and Villanova. Among their 1913 victims were Richmond, Maryland, Wake Forest and Western Maryland.

Hoyas Lose To Villanova By 14 to 12

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Villanova beat Georgetown 14-12 here tonight.

Trailing 12-7 in the third period, Villanova scored when Pasquariello went over from five yards out after 10:25 of the period, and maintained that margin throughout the final quarter.

Babe Baranowski put on a dazzling one-man show to carry Georgetown to their 12-7 half-time lead.

A disappointing turnout of 12,000 saw the Babe rally his mates after the Wildcats took a 7-0 lead. After setting up the play with leaping passes to Bill Dugan and Joe Sullivan, Baranowski raced 12 yards for his first score, early in the second period.

Then, after guard Tom Nalls recovered a fumble on Villanova's 22, Baranowski went over from the two to put the Hoyas ahead.

Villanova marched 81 yards for its first touchdown. Joe Rogers bucked over from the one-foot line.

FIRST PERIOD

Zehler returned Georgetown's kickoff 20 yards to his 23. The Wildcats failed to gain and Schmid kicked to Baranowski who returned the ball 10 yards to his 34. Baranowski fooled the Wildcats with a quick kick to Villanova's 19. Rogers made the game's initial first down on the Villanova 31. Polidor skirted end for 13 yards for another, then Pasquariello bulled his way 12 more yards and a first on the Hoyas' 46.

Three palys gave Villanova another on the 34. Then Bob Polidor broke away for 30 yards before he was stopped by Tom Graham on the 4.

Pasquadriello plunged to the 1, but the Hoyas stopped Polidor six inches short of the goal. Rogers then went over for the first score. Siano missed his placement try but the Hoyas were offsides and Siano made his second kick good. Villanova led at 9.11, 7-0. After Bonaforte returned the kickoff 15 yards to his own 36, Tom Graham made the Hoyas' first first down. On the next play, however, O'Doherty fumbled and Sandusky recovered for Villanova at midfield. The Hoyas gos eve nwhen Rogers' fumble was snared by Elmer Oberto on Georgetown's 34. Baranowski then passed to End Bill Dzugan who went to Villanova's 23 on the 43-yard play, as the period ended.

SECOND PERIOD

Babe Baranowski then hit Joe Sullivan on the Villanova 10 for a first down. On a sweep, Baranowski lost two but immediately redeemed himself. When he couldn't find a man open on the next play, he ran wide and just sliced into the end zone for a 12-yard touchdown. Baranowski's dropkick was wide. Georgetown trailed 7-6, at 1:58. After the kickoff Gordon's lateral

Chest Drive Benefits in Night Game At Ball Park

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

The Interhigh football championship game betwen Central and McKinley will be played at Griffith Stadium the night of November 28 with a portion of the receipts going to the Community Chest campaign.

The contest will be conducted under the auspices of the Board of Education and The Washington Post.

The eight Interhighs also will share in the receipts, dividing $10,000 for the purchase of athletic equipment. None of this money will go into general funds of the various schools.

All money above the amount which the schools receive will be Chest.

Bigger Than Last Year

Last year the Interhigh championship game was played at night at Griffith Stadium for the benefit of Children's Hospital with the entire receipts donated to the hospital.

An all-time record crowd of 18,000 for a high school game here contributed approximately $18,000 to the hospital.

Prospects are bright for an even larger crowd this year with the two contending teams, Central and McKinley, both undefeated in championship play.

Central and McKinley have completed their Interhigh schedules other than meeting each other. Central and McKinley originally scheduled to meet November 22 but the board of education has decided to reschedule this contest for November 28 as it becomes the championship game.

Griffith Donates Stadium

Tickets prices have been established at $1, $1.50 and $2, plus tax for the general public with students holding athletic cards admitted for 25 cents.

All tickets sold to the general public will be reserved. The sale will open in a few days with tickets available at Griffith Stadium, the Fairway Sports Shop and the lobby of The Washington Post.

Clark Griffith has donated the use of the stadium as he did last year.

Metro Playoff Set Tomorrow

A Metropolitan Football League double-header playoff is scheduled at Griffith Stadium tomorrow.

Southeast A. C. meets the Southwest Merchants in the 160-pound opener at 1 p. m. and Car Credit tangles with the Anacostia Eagles in the unlimited class at 3.

League President Andy Farkas has predicted the largest crowd ever to witness a local sandlot game, proceeds of which will be divided between Children's Hospital and the league.

Tickets are on sale at Farkas' Sporting Goods Store, Riverside Stadium, Griffith Stadium, the Washington Redskins office and at the Arrow Linen Service Co. Tickets are priced at $1.00, but children under 12 will be admitted for 25 cents.

Gaithersburg Wins, 12-7

Gaithersburg defeated Bullis Prep's second string, 12-7, yesterday at Gaithersburg. Peter Beal scored both touchdowns for the victors, catching two passes of 20 and 30 yards.

Homecoming

W. Virginia Plays Host To Cavaliers

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 14. A crowd of more than 22,000 is expected to help the University of West Virginia Mountaineers celebrate their Homecoming Day tomorrow when they battle the once-beaten Cavaliers from Virginia.

It will be the first homecoming in five years in which the Mountaineers will take the field the underdogs. The Mountaineers' last three 1947 outings, against Penn State, Maryland and Kentucky, have resulted in defeats. They had easily won their first four, over Otterbein, Washington and Lee, Waynesburg and N. Y. U.

The Cavaliers, who'll outweigh West Virginia by 14 pounds per man on the line, were undefeated until they lost to unbeaten Pensylvania, 19-7, last Saturday. They had previously whipped George Washington, V. P. I., Harvard, Washington and Lee, V. M. I. and Richmond.

In their first appearance against West Virginia in Morgantown since 1922, the Cavaliers will let loose one of the greatest collections of backs in the East in Bruce Bailey, Ray Brown, Ralph Shoaf, Billy Pennel, Grover Jones, Ray McNabb, Whitey Nichols George Neff, Johnny Papit and Joe McCary. It's a homecoming, by the way, for Quarterback McCary, who is a native West Virginian and who'll handle the T-formation for the Cavaliers.

Operating the T-formation for the hosts will be Quarterback Russ Combs. He'll be joined in the backfield by Charlie Becca and Vic Bonfili at the halves and Rex Bumgardner at full. Gene Corum, stellar guard, will captain the Mountaineers.

DiMaggio Used Bluff, Not Arm

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—Joltin' Joe DiMaggio, who has spent almost as much time in hospitals as on the ball field, let it be known today he played practically all last season in the New York Yankee centerfield with a sore throwing arm that was good for only one peg a game.

The Yankee slugger is back in Johns Hopkins Hospital to have a chip removed from the ailing elbow. While here he also is undergoing all sorts of tests in an effort to find out just what has caused him a seemingly endless series of physical ailments.

As for the elbow, DiMaggio says he first felt twinges in it a year and a half ago. It got worse until the middle of last summer he was able to make only one "hard" peg a game.

The other Yankee outfielders helped him cover up the weakness by moving over to assist whenever possible, and neither the American League opposition nor Brooklyn in the World Series ever got wise. As for the latter games Joe says once he felt as though he had thrown his arm with the ball.

Game Warden Sees Record Deer Kill

Winchester, Va., Nov. 14.—Game Warden Earl Cather announced eight big-game checking stations for the three-day deer season opening in Frederick County November 15 and predicted that the kill would be more than last season when more than a hundred bucks were legally slain.

Deer are "rather plentiful," he said. The bag limit is one a day. Turkeys may also be legally killed starting Saturday. The bag limit is two a day. Falling on a weekend the deer season will be split this year, November 15, 17 and 18

Surprising Indians Hold Cadets, 13-12

The magic toe of Jack George squeezed an overconfident St. John's eleven to a 13-12 victory over Anacostia High School yesterday at Anacostia Stadium. A crowd of 1500 saw the contest.

The prep boys scored first as they received the opening kickoff and moved steadily down the field from their own 40. George, when unable to find a receiver for a pass three plays later, ran the ball from the 16 to the two and on the next play Bob Poch scored. The try for extra point was not good.

As soon as Anacostia got the ball they came right back to go from their own 26 to the St. Johns' goal. After racking up three first downs, they scored when Bob Mitchell threw a pass from the 15 to End Jim Hiaber on the one. He went over standing up. Bill Neal's buck for point was short.

Anacostia took the lead in the third period when Dick Frasier threw a 34-yard touchdown pass to Hiaber on the goal. Jim Lassiter's boot for the point was wide.

St. Johns, aided by a 15-yard penalty on the fourth down, won the game in the last quarter. A 25-yard pass from George to Tom Fannon put the ball on the 23. But St. Johns was stopped there and forced to kick. Anacostia's line roughed the kicker and the Johnnies moved to the eight. Three plays later Bob Poch went around left end for the score. George split the goal posts with his extra point kick and the Johnnies remained undefeated.

Landon Triumphs

Landon School scored a 19-6 triumph over St. Alban to win its fourth Interstate Athletic Conference game yesterday at Landon.

Quarterback Emerson Gardner scored the first Landon touchdown on a 1-yard buck. Sub Quarterback Ray Lewis added another 6-pointer when he dashed 28 yards after faking a pass. Fullback Tom Burckes plunged over from the 1 for the third Landon score.

Fullback Frank Lee took a 7-yard pass in the end zone from Sub Left Halfback Walter Leach for St. Alban's only score. Gardner place-kicked the only extra point.

Tear Gas Halts Terp Street Rally

Prince Georges County police were forced to use tear gas to disperse a crowd of over 600 Maryland students, who were whooping it up on the United States No. 1 highway in College Park last night.

The throng had just left Ritchie Coliseum where they had attended a pep meeting for today's Maryland-North Carolina game.

Several students attempted to start a bonfire in front of the Fire Department, but police arrived in time to halt their little prank.

There were no arrests and no injuries, police reported.

Colonials Try for First Win Again Today Against Wayne

By a Staff Correspondent

Detroit, Nov. 14—Neil "Skip" Stahley, coach of the George Washington University grid forces, flew into town today with the most unusual team in his 18 years of collegiate coaching.

In the Colonial eleven which he will send against Wayne University tomorrow Coach Stahley has his first loser.

Six straight losses are behind the 1947 Colonials and even with victories tomorrow and in their last two games they will be far removed from the better-than-.500 class in which every other Stahley team has finished.

"Skip," who started coaching in 1930 at Western Maryland and continued at Delaware, Harvard, Brown, and the San Diego Naval Training Center, had compiled an enviable record before 1947. His teams had won 44 games, lost 24 and tied 3.

Even the 1946 Colonials upheld their mentor's mark with four victories, three losses and a tie.

Tomorrow Stahley will send against Wayne approximately the same outfit which lost a 42-6 game to V.P.I. two weeks ago. He will have the edge as far as the '46 G.W.-Wayne game is concerned, the G-Streeters having won by 20-6.

But this year Wayne boasts a record of four won and two lost and one of the best small college rushing marks.

G. W.'s retaliation will come from a backfield composed of Wapinsky, Cavallo, Dugoff and Spangler and a line still crippled from a loss to Miami three weeks ago.

Rockville, Md., Nov. 14.—Bethesda-Chevy Chase scored a 30-6 victory over Richard Montgomery High here yesterday in a game that sent 17-year-old Rockville quarterback Albert L. Wratten to Suburban Hospital with serious head injuries.

Wratten, who lives at 16 Thomas st., Rockville, Md., with his father, Joseph B. Wratten, was still unconscious when admitted to the hospital and was scheduled to be operated on.

BBC scores in the football game were made by fullback Dick Kaiser, who plunged over for two touchdowns; left end Dave Parkinson, who caught a 35-yard scoring pass from left halfback Henry Kamp; halfback Roddy Ware, who took a 25-yard pass from halfback Johnny VanWagner and went 5 yards to score, and Jim Brown, who went 2 yards.

Dean Scores Three As Friends Win, 25-18

Tommy Dean's two fourth-quarter touchdowns gave Sidwell Friends School a 25-18 victory over Baltimore Friendss yesterday in an Interstate Athletic Conference game at Sidwell Friends field.

Dean tallied three times in all, crossing the Baleimore goal line on a 5-yard plunge in each instance. The Sidwell ace, who is one of the District's highest scorers, passed to Mike Mills for the fourth Sidwell touchdown on a play covering 13 yards.

All three Baltimore touchdowns came on long pass plays. Mike Dix, Baltimore quarterback, passed 52 yards and 53 yards to John Collon for scores and topped this with a 60-yard effort to Charless Schnepfe for another tally. The triumph gave Sidwell a record of 4-1 for Interstate Athletic Conference play, and a 6-1 mark for the season.

was grabbed by End George Benigni on the Hoyas' 34. While the Wildcats were making a substitution and had only 10 men on the field, Baranowski threw another strike to Joe Sullivan, who went to Villanova's 41 but the Hoya attack stalled and Surman punted to Villanova's 10. Then Schmid fumbled on Villanova's 22 and Guard Jim Nalls recovered for Georgetown. Baranowski completed a pass to Dzugan on the 10. Fullback Brooke Beyer fought his way to the 2. Crossing up the Wildcats, Baranowski made a sweep off tackle to register his second six-pointer. This time the Babe's dropkick was low and the Hoyas' led 12-7.

Hoya Alumni Plan $800,000 Drive for Gym

A Nation-wide campaign to raise at least $800,000 to build a campus gymnasium has been announced by the board of governors of the Georgetown University Alumni Association.

The drive will run January 26 to March 6, 1948, under the direction of National Committee Chairman Charles J. Milton, '35, of Jersey City. John A. Reilly, '24, of Washington will be national treasurer.

The proposed structure will be erected as a memorial to the late Father Vincent S. McDonough, S. J., who was Georgetown's director of athletics from 1926 to 1929.

Rose Bowl Bid at Stake

Despite the Records, Badgers Feel They'll Beat Michigan

Madison, Wis., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Wolverines of Michigan, unbeaten in 11 straight games and never beaten at Camp Randall here, face the University of Wisconsin's Badgers tomorrow with the Western Conference title and Rose Bowl hopes at stake.

A crowd of 45,000 will jam the historic horseshoe stadium to watch the Badgers attempt to snap their home field jinx. Another 20,000 would be there, but all seats were gone a month ago.

Michigan has been installed a two-touchdown favorite by most experts, but the fans in this State capital-college town think otherwise. So do the Badger players, who've shown more zip in practice this week than at any time during the season.

Tomorrow's game will be the twenty-second meeting of the two teams. Only four times have the Badgers won, the last time at Ann Arbor 13 years ago.

Wisconsin is undefeated in the Big Nine but has a 7-7 tie with Indiana. In addition the Badgers absorbed a 48-7 pasting from California. That defeat, considered demoralizing at the time, proved instead to be "just what the doctor ordered." Since then the Badgers have been a different ball club, rolling over Yale, Marquette, Northwestern and Iowa and looking better every game.

The Wolverines, currently the No. 2 team in the Nation, romped over Michigan State, Stanford and Pittsburgh before trouncing Northwestern, their first conference foe. Since then they've defeated Minnesota and Illinois each by a single touchdown margin, and whipped Indiana.

A sensational sophomore, Earl (Jug) Girard is the man on whom Wisconsin's hopes are pinned. The Marinette, Wis., speedster is a terror in the open field and if the Badger forwards can spring him into the secondary he's a distinct threat to go all the way.

For Michigan, of course, it's Bob Chappuis, a great passer and a hard runner, operating with a host of fine backs like Chalmers (Bump) Elliott, who has scored at least once in each Michigan victory this year; Jack Weisenburger, the spinning fullback, and Gene Derricotte.

Probable lineups:

Keller Given Good Chance to Play by Doctors

Frederick, Md., Nov. 14—"The doctors seem to think I have a pretty good chance," New York Yankee Outfielder Charlie Keller said yesterday when asked if his hopes for return to baseball next spring had brightened any.

Explainging that he is "taking it easy" and following a schedule of exercise daily, Charlie said the answer to his problem will not be supplied until next spring when he reports for training.

Both the doctors and Keller are more hopeful now for his return to baseball than they were last summer when back injuries forced him out of action and under a surgeon's knife.

Chandler Warns

Baseball Heads Face Year Ban If They Sign Schoolboys

Cincinnati, Nov. 14 (AP).—A year's suspension from baseball will be imposed by Commissioner A. B. Chandler on any one who violates the rule prohibiting the signing of high school players, he announced today.

In the past the penalty has been $500, with the player being declared a free agent and the club prohibited forever from acquiring his services. The new penalty became effective today, the commissioner said in a directive to all major and minor league clubs.

Chandler said in the order:

"Any club official or employe conducting any such negotiations who does not establish that he did not know and by exercising reasonable care and diligence could not have known such interference with such player's eligibility shall be ineligibilized for one year."

He also told club officials to reread the rule prohibiting negotiations with high school boys and said "attention is again specifically called to the fact that this rule is being interpreted as applying to all high school students in the United States and Canada."

The strengthening of the rule follows the suspension of the Chicago White Sox and Leslie O'Connor, the club's general manager, on October 29, after Chandler declared it had been violated when George Zoeterman, a young Chicago pitchere, was signed.

O'Connor held that the rule did not apply in Zoeterman's case because he attended a school which was not a member of the National Federation of High School Associations, and declined to pay the fine. Zoeterman attended Christian High School in Chicago.

O'Connor's action was described by Chandler as "a direct defiance" of the rule.

The American League in a special meeting in Cleveland, upheld Chandler and at his request replaced O'Connor as its representative on baseball's executive council. The White Sox paid the fine and both club and O'Connor were restored to good standing.

5 Men Would 'Make' Skins, Marshall Says

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Washington Redskins, in spite of a four-game losing streak, await their Sunday argument with the Detroit Lions secure in the knowledge they are only five players short of championship caliber.

They know because owner George Marshall says so.

"We thought we were going to have our greatest team of all time this year," his ownership explained yesterday, "but we tried too many rookies in one year—13 of 'em. With the cream of what we have, though, and five good additions we'll be right back up there in 1948."

Three New Backs Sought

Three of the newcomers, it has been decided, must be backfield men. The other two presumably will fill in the middle of a leaky line since Redskin officials still insist they've got the finest group of ends in the league.

Thus the National Football League draft and its Wilmington, Del., farm team are of prime importance to Redskin management. The draft won't occur until late December and its more of a gamble than ever with the All-America Conference flashing huge payrolls. So Wilmington in the American League may have to be the answer.

Mont Will Be Used

There the Clippers have had an erratic season and Bethlehem, a Philadelphia Eagle farm, has already sewed up the sectional crown. But three players have stood out, attracting intense interest of the 'Skins.

Tommy Mont, former Maryland quarterback who started the season as Sammy Baugh's second understudy, has developed as a running back. The Redskins dream of bringing him back in '48 as a halfback, retaining Jim Youell to back up Baugh.

Fullback Jim Hefti, also with the 'Skins in training, has been bowling 'em over, but his recall seems doubtful with the Redskins now boasting four capable fullbacks. At center, however, "Tuffy" McCormick is a veritable cinch to see action next year if Ki Aldrich retires as he threatens.

AA Will Oppose Coast Loop's Bid

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 14 (AP).—President Frank Lane of the American Association predicted today the directors of his league would oppose, at the annual meeting November 30 in Miami, Fla., the Pacific Coast loop's request for dual major-minor status.

The coast circuit, Lane said, is seeking "fast action on its bid for a new classification which would place it between the present triple-A and the majors."

Lane also blasted at the coast league's request that it be permitted to retain players for six years, instead of four, before they would become eligible for the draft, but said he had no objection to the loop changing its name.

Hite, Durand Give Eastern 13-7 Victory

Eastern's Ramblers called on two sophomores to defeat the Wilson Green Tigers, 13-7, yesterday at Eastern.

Sophomore Richie Hite, scored first when he returned a punt 50 yards through the Wilson team. Eddie Smith fumbled the pass from center on the conversion attempt.

Buddy Durand, playing his first year of varsity ball, ran off tackle from the Eastern 45 to the Wilson 1-foot line before he was stopped, to set up the final Raider score in the fourth period. On the next play Eddie Smith bucked the line for the touchdown. Sonny Wesley's kick was good.

Wilson made it closer in the final minutes of play after an 84-yard drive was capped by Mole Janigian's pass to Eddie Doyle for 5 yards and a touchdown. Dan Ventries passed to Bill Voigt for the conversion.

Two stars were missing from the game, Sal De Giorgi for Eastern and Pat O'Neill for Wilson. De Giorgi suffered a slight concussion in the Roosevelt game and won't be available until the All-High game, while O'Neill is in the hospital after having a tumor removed from his leg. He will be out until the All-High game.

Hunting Seasons Get Under Way in Md. and Va.

By The Associated Press

Maryland's 40-day hunting season gets under way today at sunrise.

Start of the upland season coincides with the close of the 12 days of the split wild waterfowl season. Wild waterfowl will become fair game again for 12 days starting December 23.

Rabbits, quail and turkey may be bagged only between November 15 and November 29, and again from December 8 to December 31. The small game season will be suspended for six days of deer shooting—December 1-6. A notable change in this year's regulations is that it is illegal to shoot squirrels.

Over in Virginia, the general hunting season for quail, rabbits, grouse, pheasants and turkeys also will open today in Culpeper, Fauquier, Loudoun, Prince William and Stafford Counties—five days earlier than in other counties in this area. It will end January 1.

In most counties east of the Blue Ridge, the deer season opens Thursday and closes January 5. The bag limit is one a season except in Caroline, where it is two a season. Culpeper, Fauquier, Orange, Prince William and Stafford are closed to deer hunting.

Leeman's at Touchdown

"Tuffy" Leemans, one of the greatest football players ever turned out by George Washington University and for years a standout with the New York Giants, of the National Pro Football League, will be main speaker at the Touchdown Club's luncheon Monday at 12:30 p. m.

Terps Draw 31,000 to Game Today

touted Charlie Justice, to lead them to victory.

Sensational as a freshman last year when he led the Carolinians to the Sugar Bowl, Justice hasn't equaled his 1946 performance this season, but he's still the man who makes the Tarheels move.

Whenever the opposition stacks its defense to flag down the triple-threat, 22-year-old "Choo-Choo" from Asheville, N. C., Justice calls on a host of other fine backs to single wing their way through the foe.

SEASON'S RECORDS

North Carolina			Maryland
Pts.		Pts.	Pts.		Pts.
14	Georgia	7	19	So. Carolina	13
0	Texas	34	43	Delaware	19
7	Wake Forest	19	18	Richmond	6
13	Wm. and Mary	7	7	Duke	19
35	Florida	7	21	Va. Tech	19
20	Tennessee	6	27	West. Va.	0
			32	Duquesne	0

These include Fullbacks Walt Pupa and Hosea Rodgers and Wingbacks Jimmy Camp and Johnny Clements.

Respecting the experience and depth of the visitors and heeding the storm warnings that the Tarheels hoisted as they rumbled through their last four games by lopsided margins, the odds-makers have established the ham-and-hominy belt representatives a 14-point favorite.

This, however, has failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the Maryland contingent, who are backing their color-bearers to the hilt.

Kinney Ready to Go

The Terps got an added lift last night when Trainer Duke Wyre announced that the bruised right shoulder of Center Gene Kinney, Maryland's defensive bulwark, had improved to such an extent that he'll be ready to go today, although he may not start.

Maryland is going all out for this one. The team climaxed a week of grueling preparations yesterday with a skull session and lectures by the coaches who have scouted Carolina five times this year.

Some trick, fancy and "secret" stuff has been added to the Terps' offense and if it clicks College Park may experience the joy of a victory over North Carolina, something which hasn't happed in 10 years.

If Gambino can sprint by the sure-tackling Tarheels, if Quarterback Vic Turyn can click on his short, swift passes, if the Terp line can stand up under the pressure of the bigger Carolina forwards, Maryland may win.

From this outpost, however, it appears that the teacher, Coach Carl Snavely, has too much for his former pupil—Jim Tatum. So, Carolina by three touchdowns!

Air Patrol Romps Home With Bowie's Opening Day Feature

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS: At Bowie

My one-man campaign hasn't gotten very far but I still have hopes. I mean about getting a "consolation," daily double payoff in Maryland. The unfair situation came up again on the opening program. After Spring Folly won the first race, Wellfret was found to be lame at the post and was ordered scratched. Daily double holders of tickets on the Spring-Folly-Wellfret combination received a refund of $2. So despite the fact you had a winner you don't win. The press is reported to have broken down which accounts for the lack of programs before the first race. There were a lot of "beefs" and nobody seemed to be around to explain the situation. The turf colony here was saddened today after learning of the sudden death of Lavelle, (Buddy) Ensor, once one of the best jockeys. He died at Jamaica, N. Y. With J. V. O'Conor absent, Jack O'Keefe is serving as patrol judge here. Jockey Walter Mann arrived from New England and will ride free lance here. See you on the rail. BILL.

Floodtown Second by A Length

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 14.—Shamrock Stable's Air Patrol, most consistent horse in the barn of Art Rooney, turned on a stretch drive and won the Cherrystone, opening day feature of a program witnessed by a crowd of 10,000.

Jockey Paul Keiper had to push the son of Sun Teddy hard to get home a length in front of E. Lasker's Flood Town. In the third position came Mrs. R. B. Berini's Vanslam to be third in the field of seven.

Operating over a fast track, Air Patrol registered time of 1:12 2/5 for the 6 furlongs and returned a $4 mutuel to his legion of backers.

Always in Thick of Things

Air Patrol was always in the thick of the battle. In the early stages he was dogged by H. N. Warren's Annie's Dream. The one-time half-mile track queen was ahead leaving the backstretch but then began to fade. Air Patrol took over the pace-making job at this point.

Flood Town then moved to Air Patrol and these two were fighting it out in the early stretch when Vanslam came wide to get into the battle.

In the final struggle, however, Air Patrol answered the driving tactics of Keiper and was drawing clear of Flood Town at the end. Vanslam's bid petered out but he held the show end safe from Meetmenow.

Fifth Victory in 20 Tries

The victory was the fifth in 20 tries this year for Air Patrol who has been second nine times. The race was worth $2100 and brought the 6-year-old's 1947 earnings to $44,875.

Two foul claims were made during the afternoon and both were rejected by the stewards. In fact, the program opened on a confusion down beat when H. A. Grant's Spring Folly won the first race but had to survive an official hearing.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Aviation was second and Mrs. A. Robert's Spring Song was third. It was the rider of the last named, Jockey A. Scotti, who made the objection.

$6.40 For Spring Folly

Just where and when Spring Folly fouled Spring Song perhaps never will be known. However, it was "no dice" for Scotti and a $6.40 mutuel for the backers of Spring Folly.

The other foul claim came in the seventh race. This time H. C. Borse's Lady Pam ridden by Jockey George Cardoza, went to the front early and lasted to win by a neck.

Jockey V. Nordarse, who rode Donata Lamorte's Penetrator into second money made the futile objection this time. Third money went to R. Hullings' Palist. Once again there seemed no reason for the foul claim. Lady Pam paid a healthy $22.20.

Daily double players, of the successful variety, collected a $353.20 mutuel on the 10 and 9 combination. After Spring Folly took the opener, the second event went to P. Sullivan's Towns Bully at $53.20.

Vanderbilt Receives 10 Post-Season 'Feelers'

Miami, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—Ten postseason bowl "feelers" have been extended to Vanderbilt, Coach Red Sanders said here today. Beyond that point the Commodore chief isn't talking. He indicated, however, that Vandy will be receptive if it finishes its schedule without further losses. Vandy has been beaten by Kentucky and LSU.

Schoolboy Pacts Rate 1-Year Ban

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati, Nov. 14.—Baseball Commissioner Chandler announced today a one-year suspension will be imposed on anyone who negotiates with a high school player in violation of the rule.

In an announcement sent to all major and minor league clubs, Chandler said:

"Any club official or employe conducting any such negotiations who does not establish that he did not know, and by exercising reasonable care and diligence could not have known of such interference with such player's eligibility shall be ineligibilized for one year."

Cub Aid Urges Curb Of Intentional Walk

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—A plan to suppress the intentional walk, baseball's most irking stratagem to the average fan, by making it worth two bases, was proposed today by Jack Sheehan, director of the Chicago Cubs' farm system.

Sheehan also proposed a restrictive catcher's box which would force the pitcher to throw the ball somewhere within the vicinity of the plate against all batters.

Caps Play Revamped Boston Celtics Tonight at Uline's

Coach John (Honey) Russell will introduce a brand-new lineup tonight when his Boston Celtics invade Uline Arena for a Basketball Association of America game with the Washington Capitols at 8:30 o'clock.

The Caps put on a great finish to turn back the Baltimore Bullets here Wednesday, 63-55, but bowed to the Knickerbockers in New York the following night, 65-80. Meanwhile, the Bullets defeated the Celtics in Baltimore, 85-74.

Prominent among the newly acquired Bostonians are Ed Sadowski, high-scoring giant center, and Mel Riebe, forward, both former Cleveland Rebels; Cecil Hankins and George Munroe, from the St. Louis Bombers; Gene Stump, 6-foot 3-inch former DePaul University ace, and Jack "Dutch" Garfinkel, Knickerbocker transfer.

Holdovers include Charlie Hoefer, Connie Simmons, Art Spector, Eddie Ehlers and Kevin Connors.

The Caps will be shooting for their thirty-first victory in 32 starts on the home floor.

An opening game involving the Washington Cliftons and Alexandria Art Welders begins at 7:15.

Bladensburg Booters Beat Glen Burnie

Bladensburg defeated Glen Burnie, 2-0, in the first game of the Maryland District soccer playoffs at Greenbelt yesterday. The Western Shore championship will be at stake next week when Bladensburg meets Fossburg at Boonesboro, Md.

Catholic Out To Make it 3 In Row Today

A Catholic U. eleven that dropped three games in a row using the T-formation will try to win its third consecutive victory with the single-wing formation today when it plays host to Washington College at 2 p. m. at Brookland.

Between halves the Cardinal cross-country squad will make a bid for its third straight triumph in a dual meet with Loyola College of Baltimore. The Barristers will finish their 3½-mile jaunt in the stadium.

The first Cardinal football team fielded in seven years will finish the season with a .500 record if it turns back the Shoremen and Coach Gene Augusterfer is ready to shoot the works. He'll put his trust in the passing and punting of Joe Maiur; the running of Gus Gersin and Bill Holl, more passing by Joe Dunn, and a husky line that has shown improvement with each added start.

Catholic last week turned back Mount St. Mary's, 26-0, while Washington lost a heart-breaking 12-14 game to Hampden-Sidney. The Shoremen also defeated the Mounts, 14-0.

GI Home Cases Against Quick Completed

Two charges that District real estate broker Mitchell Quick participated in a scheme to sell homes to veterans at prices higher than Veterans' Administration appraisals were heard yesterday.

Airing of a similar charge required an all-day hearing before the District Real Estate Commission Wednesday.

All three cases were completed yesterday and taken under advisement by the commission. Chairman Edward A. Dent said a decision might be reached Wednesday.

They involved the alleged part Quick played in sale of properties to Joseph N. Slaughter at 2028 Gales st. ne.; James L. Moses, 2024 Gales st. ne.; and Clarence W. Dickason and John W. Liggett, both of 614 19th st. ne.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward A. Beard asked the Commission to revoke Quick's license for allegedly manipulating the property sales at prices higher than VA appraisers' valuations.

Each case involved cash payments in addition to VA loans granted on what was supposed to be full valuation of the property, Dent said.

Quick denied that he had participated in over-valuation sales, but admitted he knew about arrangements for them between the veterans and original owners.

Hecht Stores Are Visited By Suppliers

A thousand men and women spent the afternoon yesterday at the Hecht Co. stores in Washington and Silver Spring, inspecting almost everything the firm had to offer, but didn't buy a thing.

The reason: They were the manufacturers of the goods on the shelves of the stores and were here on an inspection trip of the recently remodeled District store and the newly opened Silver Spring unit.

The manufacturers, who represented the largest gathering of such individuals in Washington, were the guests of Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co., Washington.

They toured the Washington store in the afternoon and particularly looked over the million-dollar renovations. In the evening they inspected the new $2,500,000 store in Silver Spring. They were enthusiastic about both, Hecht Co. officials reported.

Between the inspection tours, the manufacturers, who turn out everything from pots and pans to fur coats, were entertained at the Washington Hotel with a buffet supper and coctail party as guests of the firm.

Several will remain today to continue their tours of the store units, officials said.

U. S. Workers Going to Fete on Government Day

District government workers who can be spared, will be excused an hour early Thursday to attend "Government Day" ceremonies in connection with Rededication Week.

The ceremonies, one of a series of programs being held as a prelude to arrival of the Freedom Train, Thanksgiving Day, November 27, will be held at 4 p. m. in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution ave. between 12th and 14th sts.

Exhibits of historic documents will be presented by Government agencies during Rededication Week, it was announced following a conference of representatives of Federal agencies employing more than 1000 persons and George Morris Fay, United States attorney for the District, and vice chairman of the Government Day committee.

The 100-piece United States Army Band will also participate in Rededication Week ceremonies, Brig. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commanding military district of Washington, announced yesterday.

Group Studying Way to Release Atomic Data

Agents of England, Canada and this country met yesterday to discuss giving out more atomic information, without giving away any military secrets.

All three countries have been releasing atomic data under a policy set by the United States. Many scientists assert data that would help medicine and industry have been bottled up for no good reason. The meeting to discuss this problem was called in September.

Chairman David Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission said the meeting was to draft a uniform policy and to insure the greatest security. The meeting will go on today and tomorrow and the new policy, if one is drawn, will be placed before the three governments.

School Group Elects

The Overlee Preschool Cooperative Association has elected Mrs. John Brougher of Arlington president for hte coming year. Other new officers are Mrs. Charles N. Lewis, vice president; Mrs. Leonard Bastian, secretary, and Mrs. E. Dale Marston, treasurer. The association operates a nursery school and kindergarten at 6215 N. Washington blvd., Arlington.

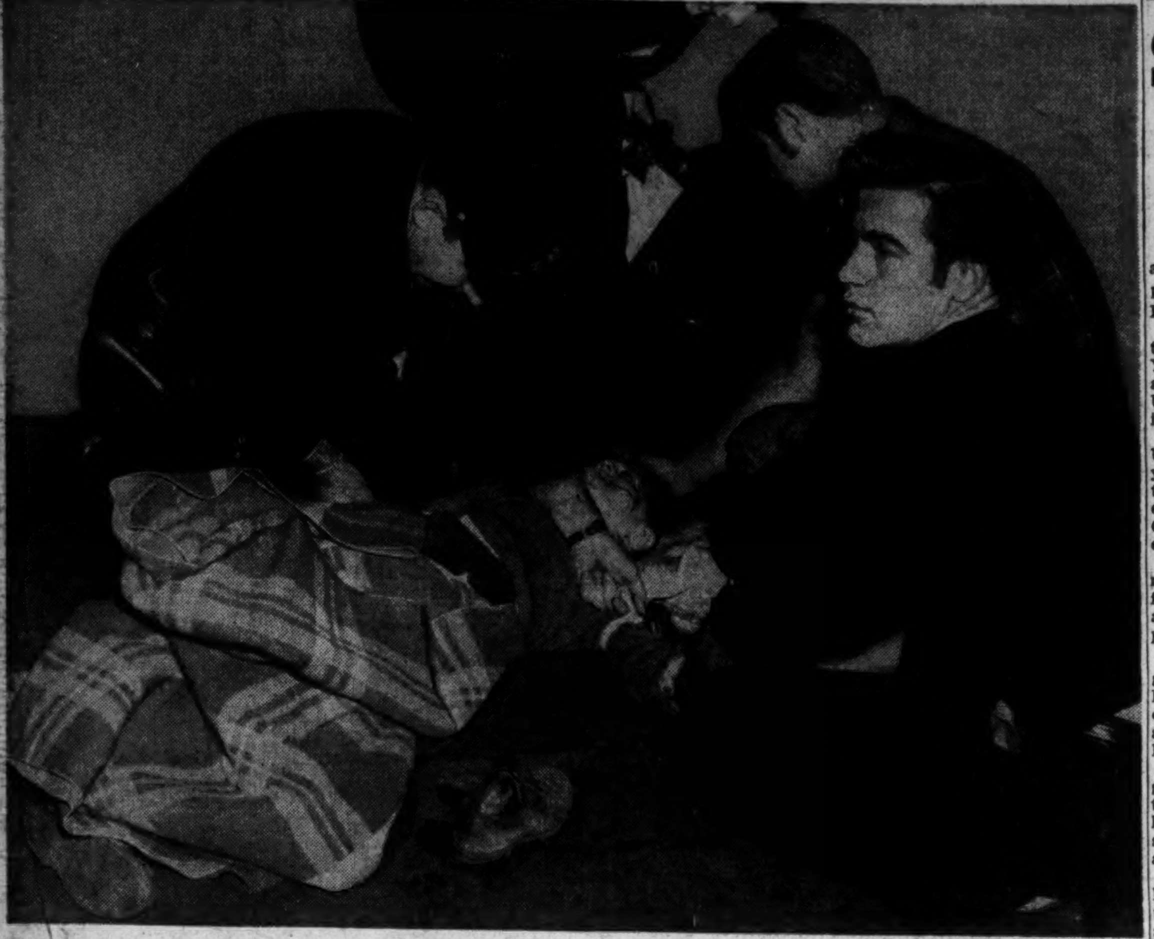
School Was Out and Joe Was Playing . . .



By William Klemm—The Washington Post

COP AIDS BOY TRAFFIC VICTIM—Today would have been a holiday from school for Joe Lucas, 8, of 525 15th st. se., but instead of playing with the other neighborhood youngsters, Joe will be in Providence Hospital. Even so, he's lucky to be alive. Police say Joe threw a stick across the street and ran to retrieve it when he crossed the path of an oncoming auto driven, they said, by Lewis A. Washington, 28, of 5122 Lee st. ne. He was carried 30 feet on the hood of the car. Pvt. Remy G. Ducote, a motorcycle man of the traffic division, used his hindkerchief and a penknife to apply a tourniquet to Joe's bleeding arm before a Health Department ambulance arrived to take him to Gallinger Hospital. His condition was pronounced "not serious" and the boy was transferred to the other hospital. Washington was not charged

Receiving Home 'A Sorry Mess,' Says Miller After Surprise Call

Psychiatric Expert Will Investigate Gallinger Service Before December 1

A New York authority on psychiatry will begin an investigatoin of psychiatric services at Gallinger Hospital before December 1.

Dr. Samuel B. Wortis, chief of the psychiatric division of New York City's Bellevue Hospital, has accepted an invitation by the United States Public Health Service to make the study.

Dr. Robert H. Felix, head of the USPHS mental hygiene division, yesterday announced the investigation had been arranged at the request of the health officer, George C. Ruhland, and Dr. Alvin Sweeney, Gallinger superintendent.

It will include study of both the medical and administrative setups for handling psychiatric patients at Gallinger, it was revealed.

Report for Ruhland

"Dr. Wortis will size it up and give us a report to send to Dr. Ruhland," Dr. Sweeney explained, emphasizing that the survey was an USPHS "service" to the District Health Department.

He said Dr. Wortis "couldn't give a definite date" for beginning the investigation but had indicated he would come to Washington sometime between November 17 and December 1.

Dr. Ruhland said, "I shall be delighted to see him here." He added that he hoped Dr. Wortis could supply the answer to problems of staffing the psychiatric ward, particularly those of recruitment.

"If he can tell us of likely prospects it will be greatly appreciated," he declared. He said he also was eager to obtain suggestions from Dr. Wortis about the administrative setup for handling chronic alcoholics.

Has Long Experience

USPHS officials said Dr. Wortis had been chosen for the investigation because of his long experience both in psychiatry and city hospital administration. He is a consultant to the USPHS surgeon general on psychiatry, and also professor of psychiatry at New York University's Medical College, they said.

Announcement of the survey, requested "three or four weeks ago," came close on the heels of Wednesday's disclosure that psychiatric patients are shackled to their beds at Gallinger due to lack of trained personnel.

Gallinger officials told Commissioner Guy Mason at a special meeting Wednesday that trained personnel had left the hospital during the war and never returned.

At Mason's request, Gallinger and Health Department officials are preparing a report on what should be done immediately to improve the hospital's psychiatric services with present facilities.

Dr. Ruhland said last night that the report was nearing completion and "definitely" would be forwarded to the Commissioners "the first of next week."

Conditions Viewed By District Group Member, as Welfare Board Takes Steps

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday concluded a surprise visit to the Distict Receiving Home for Children by calling it "a sorry mess."

His surprise visit preceded by a few hours a previously called special meeting of the Board of Welfare at the Municipal Center to consider what action was taken on problems of personnel and finance in connection with the overcrowded receiving home, 5200 Little Falls rd. nw.

Miller, who has been touring District institutions as chairman of the House District Subcommittee on Health, Education and Recreation, said following his visit to the home that its superintendent, Dr. William H. Stavsky, "understands the problems and has made many improvements."

Problems Put to Board

The meeting of the board was called following a report on conditions at the Receiving Home by Dr. Stavsky and the board's committee on institutions. The committee, after a visit last week, referred the problem to the board for action.

In substance these situations confronted the board:

1. Though the capacity of the home is theoretically 43 children, its population has been averaging about 100 children during the past four months. There have been as many as 112. Yesterday morning there were 97 children.

2. Despite the increase in the number of children, the staff at the home, 43 persons, has not been augmented. Since the closing of the second floor of the Lincoln Building some months ago for repairs the children have had to be spread over three buildings, thereby reducing the number of children that individual attendants can care for.

3. The increased work for the limited number of employes has meant payment of overtime, drawing heavily on limited funds. The overtime has prevented the employes from taking leave as provided by law.

Government Physicist Is Held For Grand Jury in Abortion

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Harold De Freest Miller, 46-year-old Bureau of Standards physicist, held for the grand jury in connection with an abortion death.

Miller, who lives at 1604 Q st. nw., is charged by police with performing an abortion which resulted in the death of Miss Agnes M. Blume, 26, Remington Rand Co. receptionist.

Miss Blume, who lived at 821 Emerson st. nw., was admitted to Emergency Hospitol October 23, and died three days later.

Principal witness at yesterday's inquest was Mrs. Ardith Bailey of 9222 Long Branch prkwy., Silver Spring, Md., who said she had known Miss Blume for about eight or nine months.

Woman Tells of Loan

Mrs. Bailey said she met Miss Miss Blume in Silver Spring, October 18, to cosign a $300 note. She said Miss Blume told her she neede dthe money for a "stomach operation."

Mrs. Bailey testified that the following day Miss Blume came to her home, admitted she was pregnant and said she was going to a restaurant that day to meet a man who had agreed to perform the abortion. Mrs. Bailey said Miss Blume told her she did not know the man, but had been told to ask for "Hal" at the restaurant.

The following day, Monday, October 20, Mrs. Bailey said she received a telephone call from a man who identified himself as "Hal." She said "Hal" informed her the abortion had been performed and that Miss Blume was getting along all right.

The same man also called Tuesday and Wednesday, October 21 and 22, to report on Miss Blume's condition, Mrs. Bailey said.

On the third day, Mrs. Bailey said she arranged to visit the girl and was met by "Hal" and taken to his apartment at 1604 Q st. nw. where she found Miss Blume lying on a cot and covered with a sheet. She said Miss Blume told her she was feeling better, but was still weak.

Mrs. Bailey identified Miller as "Hal" at the inquest. She said when she visited his apartment he showed her his equipment and told her he had performed "nearly 2000 abortions."

Dr. John E. Morris of 1746 K st. nw. testified that he first saw Miss Blume at Emergency Hospital following a call at 3 a. m. on October 23 from Miller, who he said had been a patient of his for about five years.

Doctor's Testimony

Dr. Morris said that Miller told him a friend of his needed hospitalization as the result of an attempted abortion in Baltimore the previous weekend.

The Washington Post

PHYLLIS DAVIS

Testified at inquest

Dr. Morris arranged for the patient to be admitted to Emergency Hospital. He said he saw Miss Blume frequently before she died three days later of "overwhelming infection due to attempted or criminal abortion."

Phyllis Davis, 20, former roommate of Miss Blume who now lives at the home of Mrs. Bailey; Dr. Robert L. Miller of the Emergency Hospital staff, and Detective Sergt. George W. Cook of the homicide squad were other witnesses.

The coroner's jury was out for about an hour before returning with a verdict which held Miller responsible for the death. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald released Miller in the custody of his attorney, Charles E. Ford.

Gray Skies Due Todav Over D. C.

Gray skies with some cold rain before noon was the grim weather fare offered Washington today as heavy rains and even snow took over other weather reports in the Nation.

To urban Washingtonians the rain will be just another scene of some wet times hereabouts during the past weeks. But in the southern plains area, rains wet down much of the country's parched winter wheat belt, brightening the hitherto poor crop outlook.

The rainfall in the wheat belt ranged from half inch to nearly an inch. Western Kansas and Nebraska, received a good fall of snow. As to temperatures here, yesterday's high was 48 degrees a t3:34 p. m. The mercury dropped to 35 degrees at 7 a. m. Temperatures are expected to range around the sam elevels today.

Added Night Duty Given Detectives

Detectives have been given extra night duty to cope with an expected seasonal increase in certain types of crimes, Inspector Floyd Truscott, detective chief, disclosed last night.

Truscott said that normally detectives on day duty are brought back to the detective bureau two nights a week. Now, he said, additional night duty for the day detectives has been tacked on to this.

The detective chief said he ordered the extra duty beginning Wednesday night. It involves all headquarters detectives except those assigned to the special investigations squad.

Truscott said with the beginning of cold weather there is and always has been an increase in certain crimes, particularly those of violence. He emphasized, however, that there has not been a noticeable over-all increase in crime.

Why does cold weather bring an increase in certain crimes? These are some of the factorss, according to Truscott:

1. There are fewer persons abroad in the streets, hence fewer witnesses to deter the criminal.

2. The ::small-fry" type of criminal gets cold and hungry quicker.

3. In cold weather, such criminals drink more liquor which dulles their sense of right and wrong.

Truscott said the additional night duty will probably be continued through February.

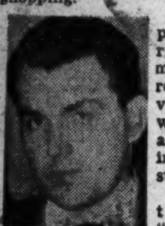
Miniature Gun Toter Called Window Thief

Shot Holes in Store Glass, Took Gems, Police Say

The arest here yesterday of a former convict from New York disclosed a new wrinkle in "window shopping."



Franklin

The suspect, police said, carried a dainty multiple-barreled caliber revolver with which he literally shot holes in Washington's store windows.

Police said this ingenious "window shopper" is Gerow P. Franklin, 28, of New York, who commuted here from Manhattan for his burglaries.

Franklin, they said, carried, in addition to the revolver, a baby's pillow, a screwdriver and a teargas fountain pen, all contained in a small canvas zipper bag.

Police said Franklin told them he pulled his jobs this way:

He would wrap his 3½-inch revolver in the pink baby pillow, and fire a shot at the store window. The pillow muffled the sound. If necessary, he would enlarge the bullet hole with the screw driver. The rest was simple: he put his arm in the window and helped himself.

Police said Franklin's excursions might have gone on indefinitely except for two things. For one thing, Police Pvt. James S. Croson, 27, of the Third Precinct, is a suspicious man. For another thing, there are no theaters on Constitution ave.

At about 3:30 a. m. yesterday, police were called to the Burk jewelry store, 614 13th st. nw. A neat hole had been drilled in the show window and $225 in rings was missing.

At about 4 a. m., Private Croson noticed Franklin standing at the corner of 18th and L sts. nw. and stopped to question him.

"I'm waiting for a bus. Gotta meet a friend in front of a theater on Constitution ave.," Franklin explained airily.

Franklin knew the bit about the theater was something for the birds so he took Franklin to the station house, where a search revealed his "shopping" equipment.

Police said Franklin was carrying five rings stolen from the window of the Burk jewelry store. They said he also admitted three other robberies here with his revolver and pillow on previous visits to Washington.

These burglaries were listed by police as the Columbia Photo Supply Co., 1424 New York ave. nw., looted of an $87.50 view finder several months ago; the Brenner Photo Co., 933 Pennsylvania ave. nw., robbed of photo equipment worth $284 last February 14, and the jewelry store of Bernard Livingston, 1005 Connecticut ave. nw., robbed of $2900 worth of jewelry last May 22.

Police studied Franklin's tiny firearm with interest. It was a Mossberg & Brown revolver with a revolving fire pin and four barrels.

According to Detective Sergt. Grayson W. Chapman of the general assignment squad, Franklin served 18 months in a penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., for counterfeiting but was paroled in 1944 to enter the Army. In the Army he was assigned to military police and was overseas about a year.

Franklin, who was booked on a charge of housebreaking, told police he is married and the father of three children. Police said he is a "good man with his hands." He said he is a graduate of a technical school in New York and at various times has worked as a wireman, a mechanical draftsman and a gunsmith.

Police Trial Board Clears Patrolman on Entry Charge

Can a policeman enter a private home without a warrant, or without even knocking, and make arrests if he hears what he believes is disorderly conduct?

A Police Trial Board yesterday held that a policeman is acting within his authority by such entry.

The board dismissed charges of conduct unbecoming an officer made against Police Pvt. Edward J. Long, jr., a member of the Metropolitan Police Force for over six years, and now attached to the Twelfth Precinct. The charges grew out of the arrest of three persons at 14 R st. ne., on October 17 at 1:30 a. m.

Charges Dismissed

In Municipal Court, Judge Armond Scott on October 21 dismissed disorderly conduct charges against the three, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Boxwell of the R st. address, and their brother-in-law, James Clark, 222 E st. ne. Judge Scott said he would have to take the word of five occupants of the house, who testified, against the word of the policeman.

Long, in defending himself before the trial board yesterday, said he heard "loud talking" when he passed the house while patrolling his beat, which "sounded like there may have been a fight." The conversation, he said, sounded "foreboding."

The Boxwells, Clark's wife, Mrs. Martha M. Clark, and a cousin of the Clark's, Claude W. Hale, all insisted they were merely having a "family discussion."

According to testimony, Long walked through the open front door of the house to the kitchen, where he attempted to arrest Clark, whom he accused of "cursing his wife." Mrs. Clark said her husband, recently treated at Garfield Hospital, was merely trying to stop her from crying over a family dispute.

Gets Reinforcements

Unsuccessful in arresting Clark, Long left the house and called for police reinforcements. A patrol wagon, two scout cars and two motorcycle policemen responded, and the Boxwells and Clark were arrested.

William H. Cheatham, assistant corporation counsel, who conducted prosecution of the case yesterday, said Long should have at least "knocked at the front door" before entering the house, and he expressed the belief that the trial board should consider the acquittal of the Boxwells and Clark in Municipal Court.

"If we have reached the point where those acquitted of a charge can then use that as a basis for prosecuting an arresting officer," countered Long's attorney, F. J. Donohue, "it's a rather dangerous situation to bring an arrest."

Members of the trial board were Inspector Clement Cox, Capt. Albert I. Bullock of the Thirteenth Counsel etaoinshrdcmfwyetauuuu Precinct, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Stanley De Neale.

In a second trial board action, Police Pvt. Raymond E. Fuge was fined $25 for failing to communicate with his station and $50 for failing to patrol his beat.

Coroner's Jury Told Boy Ran Suddenly In Front of Auto

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Melvin Floyd Wesley, 35, of responsibility for the death of 4-year-old John Thomas West of 3329 Brothers pl. se. last Monday, shortly after the boy was struck by Wesley's automobile.

Wesley

Testimony given at the inquest by two inquesting officers, Bradford McClendon and E. R. Waters, indicated the child had been playing with a friend, Tommie Witten, 4, on the sidewalk near his home.

The child started to run across the street from between two parked cars, the officers reported, just as Wesley was driving by. Wesley, a police officer attached to the Eleventh Precinct, who lives at 3342 Brothers pl., had driven from the curb, and was going about 10 or 15 miles an hour when the accident occurred, he told the investigators. He stated he did not see the child until after the accident.

2 Union Groups To Protest Navy Wage Increases

Two local union groups will hold a protest meeting at 8 o'clock tonight to protest the Navy Department's failure to grant larger wage increases this week.

Theodore R. Edmiston, president of Columbia Lodge No. 174, International Association of Machinists, said his union and the Metal Trades Council will hold the protest meeting at Labor Hall, 525 New Jersey ave. nw.

Representatives of the 700 machinists are scheduled to protest increases which ranged from one to 16 cents, he said. The increases, which were announced November 1, became effectivve 10 days later.

Jury Fails to Find Evidence of Gaming

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—The November grand jury, asked by Judge Joseph D. Mish to take "a militant attitude" toward "big-time gambling," reported today it had found "no direct evidence of commercial gambling" in Washington County.

Judge Mish had directed the grand jury to make a report on gambling because at least one crime in a recent crime outbreak had a background of "big-time gambling."

Mother Gets $1000 Award In Son's Death

A District Court jury yesterday awarded Mrs. Rosa Lee Cunningham, 2144 8th st. nw., $1000 damages in a suit growing out of the slaying of her son, by a Metropolitan policeman in May, 1943.

Mrs. Cunningham had filed suit against the officer, Pvt. Harry O. Dodson of the Tenth Precinct, charging "wrongful death through negligence."

According to the testimony, Robert was a passenger in a car driven by his cousin, Willie Cunningham, when it was fired upon by the policeman.

Charles E. Ford, Dodson's attorney, told the jury the policeman had forced Cunningham's car to the curb after Cunningham, driving on a revoked permit, had sideswiped Dodson's vehicle.

Ford said Willie Cunningham tried to run over the policeman as the officer started ot jot down his license number. The car grazed Dodson and then sped away, Ford said.

The policeman then fired two shots at the tires. One bullet penetrated the left rear fender of Cunningham's car, the other shot struck Robert in the back of the head, killing him.

Trial of the suit revolved around the question of whether Cunningham really attempted to run over the policeman, in which event he would be a felon, guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon, and liable to be fired upon; or whether he merely drove away to avoid arrest on a traffic charge. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney George Hayes.

Man Held for Trial In Clubbing Death

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Walter Sprankle, 47, was indicted for murder today by the Washington County grand jury.

Sprankle was indicted in the fatal hickory-club beating of Frederick Earl Andrews, 41.

Police said Andrews was found unconscious with 11 skull fractures the night of July 13 in the frame dwelling of Charles W. Langenstein by officers responding to a telephone call from a neighbor complaining of a row.

Detective Sergt. Wayne Sellman said Sprankle was bending over Andrew's unconscious form when police answered the call.

Trial Board Bid

G. L. Munter 'Regrets' in Murphy Case

Godfrey L. Munter, former District Bar Association president, has declined the Commissioners' invitation to serve on a three-man trial board to weigh charges against Fire Chief Clement Murphy.

Munter said last night he had informed the Commissioners of his decision. "I regret very much that I'm unavailable for that particular asignment," he said.

Officials said Munter had indicated he was too busy to serve. Murphy's trial is expected to take five or six weeks. No date has been set.

Austin F. Canfield, also a former District Bar Association president, and Joseph Wilner, local businessman, have agreed to sit on the trial board, but say they have not received notification of appointment.

Murphy will face the board on charges that he is "demoralizing" the Fire Department. Capt. Joseph W. Conroy made the accusation last June. Murphy's attorney, Martin O'Donoghue, requested a public hearing following completion of a five-month investigation by the corporation counsel's office.

Salesman Held On Rape Charge

A Baltimore encyclopedia salesman was charged last night with attempted rape of a Prince Georges County woman in her Morningside home Wednesday.

The man, Thomas F. O'Hara, jr., 22, was accused by Detective J. W. Siddall of Prince Georges County police in Marlboro, who said th weoman identified her assailant yesterday. Siddall said the victim, mother of a young daughter, reported she fought off the salesman for 40 minutes in her home in Morningside.

GSI Promotes 2 as Hoover Resigns Post

Promotion of two Government Services, Inc., executives to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Frank W. Hoover was announced yesterday by GSI.

Moved up is Robert R. Ayers, associate general manager, who will succeed Hoover, and Raymond D. Lewis, deputy general manager, who will succeed Ayers in his present post.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, GSI president, who made the announcement, said the appointments will be effective December 31, when Hoover will retire from the organization.

Ayres Lewis

Grant also indicated that another appointment, that of secretary treasurer, will be announced Monday. The post, created by merger of the two positions, formerly was filled partly by Hoover, as secretary and Samuel Goodacre, who resigned with Hoover, as treasurer.

GSI operates 53 Federal cafeterias and snack bars and other concessions.

Both Ayers and Lewis "have grown up in the business," Grant said. Ayers has been with the corporation 17 years and became associate general manager in March last year. Lewis joined GSI in 1937 and has been deputy general manager since January, 1942, later serving in the Navy for more than three years.

College Park Man Gets Fine in Lottery Case

A 42-year-old College Park, Md., gas station attendant was fined $200 in Prince Georges County Police Court at Upper Marlboro yesterday, after pleading guilty to a lottery charge.

The defendant, John C. Burk, was arrested October 31 as the result of an alibi furnished by a defendant in a robbery case. The defendant testified he was "playing numbers" with Burk at the time he was accused of committing the robbery. The arrest was made on instructions from State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie while the robbery trial was stil in progress.

The fine was levied against Burk in a brief hearing, during which Detective Sergt. J. W. Purdy testified he caught the attendant "red handed" in the act of writing numbers when he raided the filling station where Burk was employed.

60 Presentments Heeard

Approximately 60 presentments have been acted on by the Montgomery County grand jury of the November term of Circuit Court, State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson revealed yesterday.

The indictments will be reported to the court on Monday, Dawson said.

Coming in on Horseback

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) will ride into Washington on horseback tomorrow, following up with a speech at the Interior Department Auditorium at 8 p. m.

His final horseback ride will start at Mount Vernon, the last leg of a proposed transcontinental trip to "dramatize the issue of peace." He started to ride horseback all the way from California, but had to let both his horses ride in a trailer when the President's call for a special session cut short his time.

He arranged for the night meeting himself, and invited the general public to attend.

Held on Lottery Charge

Harry Oliver Smith, 50, of 5019 Sheriff rd. ne., was arrested yesterday afternoon for operation and possession of lottery slips, and released on $1500 bail for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Smith was arrested by vice squad members in the basement of 511 11th st. nw., where police said he is a building employe.

To Discuss Hospital Aid

A promise to bring up the subject of financial aid to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, at the regular meeting of the Montgomery County commissioners was made yesterday by President Brooke Johns of the board.

At a special session of the State Legislature concluded last week, the county government was given authority to purchase outright or render financial aid up to $50,000 to the debt ridden institution.

Johns yesterday also pointed to the need for additional hospital facilities. He asked Silver Spring and Bethesda "booster" groups to get together and agree on a centrally located "large and complete county hospital and health center."

Cab Driver Robbed

Lester Kidd, 31, of Vienna, Va., a Yellow Cab driver, reported being robbed of $20 and his cab by two passengers about 2 a. m. yesterday.

Kidd said he picked up the two men at 14th and I sts. nw., drove them to the 3100 block of 13th st. nw., where they struck him on the head with a hard object, robbed him, forced him to the floor and drove the cab to the 3100 block of Adams Mill rd. nw., where they dumped him out. Police recovered the cab in the 1300 block of 17th st. nw.

Educators to Study Report

Educators' interest in the new annual report of the Board of Natural Resources was shown yesterday in a request for 100 copies from the Montgomery County schools.

The report, covering the fiscal year, July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1946, summarizes departmental activities, Federal aid to conservation, enforcement of conservation laws and oyster mortality in the Chesapeake Bay.

Housing by Degrees

Well, it's one way to get that dream house, Hagerstown, Md., police reported yesterday as they posted a detail to watch an unoccupied city-owned house that's being carried away at night—piece by piece.

Thieves have walked off with doors, fixtures, windows and parts of the floors, said City Street Superintendent Charles W. Stump.

Court Reports 44 Cases

A total of 18 juvenile and 26 domestic relations cases were handled by Arlington County Court during October, Trial Justice Hugh Reid reported yesterday.

Of the juvenile cases, eight involved larceny, two possession of stolen property, three violation of probation, two neglect of children. There was also one case of assault, one of incorrigibility, and one sex offense.

The bulk of domestic relations cases, 12, concerned nonsupport. In addition, three involved threats, seven assault, two contributing to the delinquency of a minor and two prostitution.

Soldier Sentenced

Pvt. Keller Manning, 25, of Fort Belvoir, was sentenced to $50 or 30 days in jail on assault charges brought by Missy Page, 311 O st. sw., in Municipal Court yesterday.

Miss Page said she was awakened Thursday night by a tapping on the window of her first floor bedroom. She said she peered out and saw Keller standing at the window. Miss Page declared that Keller then sent a cinder block through the window shattering the glass. She ran out of the room she said and upon returning later found her bedclothes cut to ribbons.

Cleared in Assault Case

A Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday acquitted James Duca, 36, of Kaygood Gardens Apartments, Mount Rainier, Md., of ttwo assault charges arising from a street altercation in Colmar Manor, Md., August 15.

Duca was freed of assault with inttent to kill and assault and battery on Otis Dhue, 38, of the 900 block H st. ne. The jury deliberated an hour and 15 minutes after hearing testimony that Dhue, who outweighs Duca by 60 pounds, was slashed with a penknife after he had attempted to choke the defendant.

Navy Mercy Mission

Johns Hopkins Hospital officials said in Baltimore yesterday a Navy plane on an emergency mission flew a tiny "inner tube" to Portsmouth, Va., Naval Hospital for a baby who must breathe through an incision in her throat.

The Navy said that within 58 minutes after an urgent request was received at the Anacostia Naval Air Station, Lieut. Terry P. Cassidy of Ambler, Pa., had completed the trip, piloting an F6F fighter plane.

Church Ransacked

The Rev. Harlan Harris, assistant pastor of Temple Baptist Church, 1300 10th st. nw., reported that his church was ransacked by thieves who pried the screen from a basement window, broke in two doors and left a trail of candle drippings. Mr. Harris said apparently nothing was missing.

Store Restaurant Cleared by Tests Of Food Samples

None of the organisms that usually cause food poisoning has been found in food samples taken at the Woodward & Lothrop restaurant on October 24 after six employes became ill and were hospitalized.

Dr. George H. Ruhland, District health officer, anounced Thursday the negative results of the laboratory search and disclosed a recommendation that the store expand its refrigeration facilities.

Dr. J. E. Noble, director of laboratories, completed the tests of the food samples. It was explained that the sample collectors might have missed a guilty bacterial culture but that none of the food brought in would have caused illness. Bacterial count on most of the samples was average or lower than usual content. An egg salad checked "relatively high."

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

I felt like a snake's back last night. It was the first time in my life. And I didn't faint!

It was only when "Cleopatra," a 10-foot reptile from Florida, stuck out her tongue that I gasped and jumped back.

But it wasn't all tranquillity at the Ambassador Hotel, where five little girls, three young boys, three parents and 24 harmless snakes arrived for a brief stay.

An uususpecting hotel housekeeper, warned but skeptical, took one peak at the slinky visitors—bathing in a bathtub—and went screeching down the hall. So it was reported.

A visitor, Edna Moore, a bookkeeper of 1812 R st. nw., snatched one look and turned briskly away, exclaiming: "Boy, they can have 'em."

But the 10 and 11-year-old Sarasota Snake Club members, whose slogan is "never kil la harmless snake today—it can kill the poisonous snake that may kill you tomorrow," played with their pals and loved ti.

Anita Spencer, 10, wrapped "Frankie" (Sinatra), "Buster" and "Blue Boy" around her throat necklace fashion, and strutted calmly about.

Today, according to Ray Krimm, leader of the group, they'll visit the White House. But they're not counting on seeing the President.

Purpose of the junket, Krimm said, is to teach people the difference between poisonous and nonpoisonous snakes.

D. C. Jury Fails To Reach Verdict In Check Case

After five hours of deliberation, a District Court jury reported itself deadlocked yesterday in the case of Attorney John M. Holzworth, charged with passing bad checks in interstate commerce.

A new trial must be held as a result of the hung jury.

Holzworth had been accused of passing two bad checks drawn on the Bank of America at Los Angeles and totaling $50 at the Statler. He also was charged with passing two worthless checks totaling $10 and drawn on the same bank at the Gateway Restaurant in Union Station last summer.

At the trial it was brought out that the attorney once had a bank account at the Bank of America in Los Angeles in 1944 but that the account had been closed out the same year.

Md. Water Pollution Control Office Moves

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Maryland Commission on Water Pollution control officially moved into its new laboratory today at Johns Hopkins University's department of sanitary engineering.

Paul W. McKee, executive secretary of the commission, said "we will be able to perform virtually any kind of water analysis in the new laboratory."

Man Gets 2 Years On Interstate Car Theft Charge

Abingdon, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—C. H. Thompson, of Pennington Gap, was found guilty of conspiracy to violate the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act and was sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., and fined $10,000 in United States District Court here today.

Presiding Judge A. D. Barksdale gave the jury a directed verdict for acquittal in the Government's case against Harold and W. E. Bailey of Cumberland Gap, Ky., who allegedly acknowledged, as notaries, titles for the 42 stolen automobiles Thompson was accused of selling.

The jury returned their verdict after 12 minutes deliberation.

The defendant, president of the Thompson Motor Car Co., at Pennington Gap, allegedly disposed of the 41 automobiles which were reportedly stolen in various parts of Ohio, Kentucky and eastern Tennessee.

Saul Hoffman Dies; Former Post Employe

Saul (Paul) Hoffman, former circulation branch manager of The Washington Post, died at his home, 3407 Fessenden st. nw., yesterday morning after a sudden attack of pneumonia on Thursday.

Mr. Hoffman, who was well known in Washington newspaper circles, was branch manager in the Georgetown circulation district until shortly before his death.

He had been employed by The Washington Post for the past six years and was active in the paper's unit of the American Newspaper Guild and in the Washington Newspaper Guild. Mr. Hoffman was vice chairman of his unit from 1945 and served on its grievance committee for the past two years. In addition, he was a member of the executive committee of the Washington Newspaper Guild and was a delegate to the ANG convention in Scranton, Pa., last year.

Born in Baltimore, Mr. Hoffman was educated in the District schools. He was commercial manager of radio station WJSV, founder of the weekly Columbia Heights News, editor of the Daily Legal Record and was country circulation manager of the Washington Herald, since consolidated with the Washington Times. Mr. Hoffman also served as managing editor of the Savannah (Ga.) Daily News.

Active in Jewish fraternal groups, Mr. Hoffman was a past third deputy grand master of B'rith Sholom, secretary of the Friendship Lodge, a past president of the George Washington Lodge of B'rith Sholom and a member of B'nai B'rith and the Adas Israel Congregation.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Eva Hoffman; a daughter, Miss Lina Hoffman of the Fessenden st. address, and a son, Robert E. Hoffman of 2762 Woodley pl. nw.

Funeral services will be held at the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw., tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be in the Adas Israel Cemetery.

Marie Belloc Lowndes

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Adelaide Belloc Lowndes, 80, British writer of novels and reminiscences, died today in a daughter's home at Eversley Cross. Death followed a brief illness.

Mrs. Lowndes' best known novel, "The Lodger," sold more than a million copies.

Cabbie, 79, Kills Himself In Bedroom

Oscar E. Voegeli,79, a District cab driver for more than 30 years, was found dead, a pistol at his side, in his third-floor room at 2305 Pennsylvania ave. nw., yesterday.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Mr. Voegeli was "one of the most courteous and best-liked cab drivers in Washington," Lieut. Joseph Harrington, District hack inspector said, and he also was known as an amateur horticulturist.

Mr. Voegeli, a native of Switzerland, came to the United States in 1914 and was naturalized 10 years later. He was not married and apparently without relatives in this country.

Mr. Voegeli had been visiting friends in Philadelphia and returned to Washington Thursday night.

He had been in ill health for some time and had worried over relatives overseas. Though he retained his hacker's license he had not driven recently.

Low Supplies Put Martinsburg on Water Rationing

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 14 (Spl.).—This city of 20,000 was today on water-rationing because of low supplies in the reservoir and auxiliary sources.

The rationing system was instituted yesterday by the city council, which set up a conservation program. Water will be given sufficient pressure, they said, to reach all parts of the city during stated periods during the day.

Industries using water heavily have been asked to shut down the first of the week. Schools have been closed because of insufficient supplies, and a house-to-house inspection for leakage was authorized.

Self-Government In District Urged By Women Voters

The D. C. League of Women Voters has suggested to President Truman the appointment of someone "committed to the principle of self-government" in the District, as successor to District Commissioner Guy Mason.

In a letter written Thursday by Mrs. Grace H. Thomas, president of the league, the President was reminded that Mason's term expires this month. Mrs. Thomas also pointed out the President's Committee on Civil Rights, the Auchincloss Committee and the President himself, have advocated the restoration of suffrage here.

Though Mason has "served the District well," the league president concluded, home rule "will be most effectively promated if a primary qualification for appointment to this office be a commitment to cooperate with the executive and the legislative in giving reality to a new home-rule government."

Civilians Get Awards

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Capt. Jesse R. Wallace, chief of staff of the Severn River Naval Command, awarded certificates for industrial accident prevention to 52 civilian workers today at the Naval Academy.

Gen. Beaman Of Air Corps Succumbs

Brig. Gen. Bartlett Beaman, wartime chief of staff of the First Airborne Division, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Princeton, Mass. in 1891, General Beaman was graduated from Harvard College in 1913. During World War I he served as a second lieutenant in France, participating in the Meuse-Argonne offensive in 1918. Made a first lieutenant in May, 1919, he was transferred to the Third Air Interceptor Company, stationed at Binet, France. He was separated from active service in July, 1919.

During the years from 1919 to 1941, when he was reactivated with the rank of major, General Beaman was in the bond and security business, serving first with Perrin, West & Winslow, and then with Blythe & Co., both in Boston.

Made Major in 1930

Remaining in the Reserve Air Corps during that time, General Beaman was promoted to captain in 1925 and major in 1930.

Reactivated in February, 1941, General Beaman was attached to the office of the Chief of Air Staff, serving in the Intelligence Division. In July, 1941, he was made chief of the evaluation unit, Air Corps Intelligence, and six months later was made chief of staff, Headquarters of the First Bomb Wing in the European Theater.

Promoted to lieutenant colonel in February, 1942, and to colonel in November, 1943, he was again promoted in February, 1944, to brigadier general, serving as executive officer of the First Bomb Wing.

Becomes Chief of Staff

In May, 1945, General Beaman became chief of staff of the First Airborne Division, stationed in England, and was the division's last chief of staff. He returned to the United States in November, 1945, and became chief of all civilian personnel for the Air Forces.

General Beaman was awarded for his services the Distinguished Service Medal, the Bronze Star, the Air Medal, the French Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre, and last summer was made a Commander of the British Empire.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Helen S. Beaman; a sister, Miss Anne S. Beaman, Brookline, Mass.; and two brothers, Lieut. Col. H. C. Beaman, Washington, and Lieut. Comdr. John A. Beaman, Weston, Mass.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in Princeton, Mass. Burial too will be there.

C. P. Parcell, Fredericksburg's Mayor, Dies of Heart Attack

MR. PARCELL
Dead at 55

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 14 (AP). Claude P. Parcell, 55, mayor of Fredericksburg for the past two months, for 22 years previously a member of the city council and prominent in business and civic affairs here, died of a heart attack at his home today.

He retired from public life last year after serving for 10 years as president of the city council, but was called back two months ago when he was elected mayor to succeed W. Marshall King, who resigned to accept appointment to the State Corporation Commission. Parcell took office September 10.

Mayor Parcell returned to Fredericksburg two weeks ago from a trip to Miami, Fla., and Havana, Cuba, where he attended a convention of the National Milk Industry Association and the International Ice Cream Manufacturers Association.

A native of Pittsylvania County, Parcell came here in 1916 to manage the Farmers Creamery Co.

Surviving are his wife, the former Katherine Carper, of Fredericksburg; two children, Claude Parcell, jr., of this city, and Mrs. George S. Lowery, of Emporia, and one brother, Raymond E. Parcell, of Fredericksburg.

Funeral services will be held at the late mayor's home at 3:30 p. m. Sunday. Burial will take place at the Oak Hill Cemetery with Masonic rites.

Publisher's Memorable Week

Reception at Embassy Fetes Bolivian Visitor

By Marie McNair

THIS IS A week that Dr. Carlos Aramayo of Bolivia, will have reason to remember.

As publisher of La Razon, leading Bolivian newspaper, he was in New York on Tuesday to receive the Maria Moors Cabot award for his services to the people through journalism. He came to Washington on Thursday for the luncheon at the Pan American Union at which he shared honors with Dr. David Vela, another Cabot prize winner. And he stayed over for the reception yesterday afternoon which the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Martinez Vargas gave in his honor with Senora de Aramayo sharing in the spotlight, too. They'll go back to New York for a visit before starting homeward.

It was strictly a "family" party yesterday for the guests were all of the Latin-American diplomatic circle or those who have particular interests in South America.

There was quite a line standing at the drawing room door to welcome arriving guests. The Ambassador and Senora de Martinez in a sheer black crepe grown with lace inserts; Dr. Aramayo, his Senora in black taffeta cut with a swish French look and wearing a claret red velvet hat with matching osprey feathers. Raoul Diez de Medina, Minister-Counselor of the embassy, who's been around Washington since his father was Bolivian Minister a number of years, was also in the receiving line and Enrique Kempff, the First Secretary.

Envoys Attend

I caught a glimpse of the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, in a dinner jacket on his way to another party; and the Honduran Ambassador, Dr. Julian Caceres, with Senora de Caceres wearing a hat trimmed with the popular electric blue ostrich feathers.

The Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde, was there and in the kaleidoscopic picture I picked out the Chilean Ambassador, Felix Nieto del Rio chatting in a group at the bar. The new Dominican Ambasador was getting acquainted with his colleagues and pretty Senora de Thomen was being introduced around by Miss Minerva Bernardino who's Dominican by birth but makes her headquarters in Washington with the Inter-American Commission of Women.

Saw the Tom Burkes who told me they're still not sure when they're actually getting off on that South American tour by air; and Col. Robert Guggenheim on the sidelines waiting for Polly to finish her conversation to start for home. Norman Armour, Assistant Secretary of State, was accompanied by Mrs. Armour, always one of the best dressed women in any gathering. Yesterday she wore a white ermine hat a trim black pin dot satin suit with twin lapel pins of diamonds set in flower design.

Director Is Guest

Dr. Alberto Lleras, director general of the Pan American Union and Senora de Lleras were constantly surrounded; tall, ruddy cheeked John Moors Cabot, son of Dr. Godfrey Lowell Cabot who founded the Maria Moore Cabot award in memory of his wife, was also in the gathering.

Mrs. Thomas Dawson, looking fit again after a case of shingles, was with her son, Allan, who's head of the Brazilian desk of the State Department, and being warmly welcomed again was Mrs. Tomas Cajigas whose illness kept her home for many weeks. Anita Cajigas was with her mother and looking very lovely in black with a halo of roses for a hat. Another lovely lady was Mrs. George Abell in a sweeping black lace dinner gown, with her husband, the two of them stopping but for a few minutes before joining a dinner party.

Mrs. Eisenhower Given Surprise Birthday Party

Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower was guest of honor in her own home last evening when the Army Chief of Staff gave a surprise party at their Fort Myer quarters in celebration of his wife's birthday.

About 30 close personal friends of the Eisenhowers had been invited to drop in around 5 o'clock . . . and to keep it a secret from the lady of the house. Most of those were members of the "bridge and mah jongg gang" which meets regularly. Both games were the order of the evening and were interrupted only for a buffet supper and birthday greetings. Arriving from New York in time for the celebration was Margaret DeMille, who is on the staff of Mademoiselle magazine and who was the overnight guest of General and Mrs. Eisenhower.

Occupying a place of honor among the floral decorations were the American Beauty roses wired to "Mother" by Lieut. and Mrs. John S. D. Eisenhower, who are in Columbus, Ga.

Mrs. Lucy McCarty Becomes Bride of Walter S. Hood

Mrs Francis I. duPont of Wilmington, Del., announces the marriage of her niece, Mrs. Lucy Preston Mitchell McCarty of Washington, to Walter Sherfey Hood of Yorktown Heights, Westchester County, N. Y., on Saturday, November 8.

The ceremony took place at Louviers, Mrs duPont's home in Wilmington, with the Rev. William Munds, rector of Christ Church, Greenville, Del., officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her son, Preston Mitchell, and Mrs. Preston Mitchell was her matron of honor. Walter I. Hood was best man for his father. Only members of the immediate families and intimate friends were present and a wedding breakfast followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Hood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Preston and granddaughter of Col. Alfred Rhett of Charleston, S. C. She has lived in the Far East and is an authority on Japan and the Japanese. She is the widow of Marquis Irwin McCarty.

Mr. Hood, a civil engineer, is a graduate of Harvard. His first wife, Andrea Koch Hood, died in 1942.

When Grandma Was a Girl

MEMBERS of the Ladies Circle, No. 2, of All Saints' Episcopal Church at Chevy Chase Circle, ransacked their attics to produce authentic nineteenth century costumes for yesterday's unique benefit fashion show in Kingan Chapel. Long skirts were such a fad in 1887 that even little girls were draped to the ankles. Modeling two quaint frocks from that year are Elizabeth Ann Williamson and Jean Egolf. Their companion, Mrs. Ivan W. Caulsen, wears one of the elaborate dresses which were fashionable in 1864. Bodice is heavily boned, and fringed, lace and ribbon are used for trimming

Indian Embassy Dinner Party Celebrates Nehru's Birthday

The Indian Ambassador and Mme. Asaf Ali were hosts at a buffet dinner last evening at the embassy in celebration of India's Prime Minister Nehru's birthday anniversary and also as a farewell to George Merrell, newly appointed United States Ambassador to Ethiopia, and his sister, Miss Ruth Merrell. Mr. Merrell knew the Ambassador when he was our Minister in India.

Guests included the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Robert Lovett, Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, and his daughter, Mlle. Nora Martins; the Turkish Ambassador, Husein Ragip Baydur; the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong, Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, who is attending U. N. sessions in New York; the Australian Minister, Alfred Stirling and his sister, Miss Dorothy Stirling; the Minister of Saudi Arabia, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih; the Minister of Ireland and Mrs. Sean Nunan, Mme. I would like to paint several metal ash trays with a peasant design. Can you tell me of a special heat-resisting finish to protect the design? A. J.

I have been unable to locate such a transparent finish here in Washington. Heat-resistant paints are on sale in many paint stores, but they come in black, aluminum or colors, and there's some doubt about their resisting the concentrated heat of a burning cigarette pressed against them. One of them is a black stove enamel; others are paints designed for coating hot pipes. The former is sold in small quantities, but the latter is usually available only in large amounts. As you probably know, the painted ash trays you purchase in stores have a baked-on finish that's practically impossible to duplicate at home.

Can you tell me how to remove yellow paint from a white batiste blouse? I have tried applying turpentine without success. B. M.

Soaking in equal parts ammonia water and turpentine, then rinsing in fresh turpentine and washing in soapy water may take out the stain. Also rubbing lard or petroleum jelly into a stain and letting it remain overnight will soften it enough so that you can probably remove the spot with dry cleaning fluid or even soap and water. Or mix equal parts of benzine, carbon tetrachloride, and banana oil. Apply this remover and rub the spot in a dry-cleaning soap to help loosen the stain. Finally, rinse out with carbon tetrachloride.

In The Washington Post for November 4 I. M. W. asked how to crack black walnuts so that they would come out in big pieces. Last winter in Iowa, we bought some black walnuts from a farm woman. The nut meats were already picked out and the pieces were enormous—similar to English walnuts. I personally have never tried it, but she said this was her method: Pour boiling water over the walnuts before cracking and let them soak (how long I do not know). I think this system is worth trying, as hard as black walnuts are to pick out. J. B. C.

A cigarette burned a hole in the top of a blond oak coffee table. The mark is black and fairly deep. I would appreciate it if you could tell me how to repair this damage. H. K. O.

It's quite difficult to do repair work on blond furniture without having the "patch" show. The saffest procedure would be to get a professional to repair the spot or to refinish the entire top of the table yourself. If you want to try patching at home, however, here's a suggested method: Wrap fine steel wool (size 0) around the point of a wooden skewer or orange stick. Rub the burned place with the steel wool, being very careful not to mar the surrounding surface. When all the black has been removed, brush thoroughly with a soft brush to remove scrapings. Apply turpentine with a soft lintless cloth. Let dry. Then apply stick shellac in the shade recommended by your paint store for this purpose. It will have to be white or very light not to make a noticeable blot on the surface of the furniture. The hole can be filled in with this shellac, and the table then waxed.

I used an ice cube tray to make popsicles for my children all summer. Now I find it is stained and I would like to remove the stains. How can I do it? The trays are aluminum. E. W.

Steel wool or steel wool pads impregnated with a special soap (especially sold for cleaning aluminum) should remove the stains from your ice trays. Never use strong soap, alkalis, or alkaline scouring powder on them as they darken and discolor aluminum.

The following requests for china and silver, no longer being manufactured, have been received:

Noritake china in the Gainford pattern; Golden Ivy in Wedgewood Patrician china; 144-B Radisson, W. S. George china made in United States; cups and saucers which bear the mark, Theodore Haviland, Limoges, France, purchased originally in 1917 and ornamented with clusters of pink flowers and gold rims, Wallace sterling flatware in the Normandy pattern; the Cambridge pattern in Woods Ware, made by Wood & Sons, England, and Towle's Old English sterling.

Any readers of the Ask Anne column who wish to dispose of such china or silver may write to the column in care of The Washington Post, and we will notify those interested in obtaining it.

How can I clean antique brass and irons? They have not been polished for many years and I haven't had much success with the brass polish I have tried. C. E. C.

Add linseed oil to rottenstone (obtainable in drug or paint stores) until the mixture is like heavy cream. Apply mixture with a soft cloth or cotton waste and rub until tarnish disappears. Use a soft brush on embossed or carved designs. Wipe off after cleaning with cotton waste or soft cloth, dipped in linseed oil. Wipe off excess oil with soft cloth or cotton waste. Rub with flannel polishing cloth.

Could you tell me how to remove an ink spot from a gold colored blouse? I believe the material is either silk or rayon and looks as if it might be washable. I don't believe the ink is of a permanent nature. M. H.

Your chances of removing the ink from the blouse at home will be much better if the blouse is washable. If you are in doubt as to the blouse's washability, try washing a small piece from a seam or an inconspicuous spot to see the effect. If you find the material is not harmed by washing, pour glycerine or one of the soapless shampoos on the stain. Rub lightly between the hands, rinse and apply glycerine again as long as any ink comes from the stain. Rinse with clear water. Wash the entire blouse in soap and warm water. If you decide the blouse is not washable, you might remove the spot with an absorbent. Dampen the spot and spread cornstarch or cornmeal over it. Work the powder into the stain. Brush off as it becomes soiled and repeat the process.

What will remove white spots from dark furniture? The spots were caused by putting hot dishes, and spilling drinks on the table. E. E. B.

If the white spots caused by heat are not too deep, camphorated oil will help to remove them. Moisten a clean cloth with the oil and go over the spot with light strokes. Rub immediately with another clean cloth. If this doesn't remove them, refinishing will be necessary. The water rings can be lightened by going over the spot with scratch concealing polish or camphorated oil. If the first application doesn't remove it, repeat. Frequently they must be gone over several times before they lighten and disappear.

I have just moved into a new apartment and find that the previous tenant left her decals pasted to the kitchen cabinets. These are hardwood, baked enamel finish. I would appreciate your suggestions as to how I can remove these decals without doing harm to the fine gloss of the baked enamel finish. G. L.

Apply hot vinegar to the decals with a cloth or sponge and allow the vinegar to soak into them for a few minutes. Now, rub lightly and the decal will come off leaving all the paint.

All seven of the basic foods are represented by the assortment spread out before little Ellen Sachs, who couldn't resist the milk in the display. Food Expert Mrs. Clarence I. Hendrickson emphasizes that care must be taken to include all seven types in a growing child's diet when practicing food conservation. The picture was taken at the home of Ellen's mother, Mrs. Sidney Sachs, in Silver Spring, when a group of League of Women Voters members met to hear Mrs. Hendrickson and exchange food-saving suggestions

One Woman's Campaign

Neighborly Meetings Exchange Food and Budget Saving Ideas

By Lucia Brown

A unique contribution to the food-saving drive is that of a Washington housewife who, for many weeks now, has been getting neighborhood groups together for the exchange of conservation ideas

Mrs. Hendrickson

She is Mrs. Clarence I. Hendrickson of 504 Maple Ridge rd., and she has met with 350 housewives since she started her "one-woman campaign" to help save food and spare the family budget.

Food and household economics are subjects dear to the heart of Mrs. Hendrickson, who was formerly dean of home economics at Connecticut State College. Today, she is the wife of Dr. Clarence I. Hendrickson, economist with the United States Department of Agriculture, and the mother of a 19-year-old son.

This fall, Mrs. Hendrickson's natural interest in food problems was quickened by stories of hunger abroad and her own struggles to feed her family reasonably in the face of spiraling food prices. She decided to invite some of her neighbors in to talk the situation over and exchange tips on saving food and cutting costs.

The session proved so beneficial and the idea caught on so well that Mrs. Hendrickson was soon invited to conduct such meetings in other neighborhoods. She has helped with 16 so far, a number of them sponsored by members of the League of Women Voters.

A trained nutritionist, Mrs. Hendrickson usually starts the meeting with a talk on adjusting your food saving to the nuritional needs of various members of your family. She emphasizes that many grown-ups—especially those in sedentary occupations—eat more of certain foods than they really need. Children, on the other hand, must have plenty of proteins and other protective foods to aid their growth. Often "alternates" can be used, however, to fill their nutritional needs satisfactorily.

In urging a review of the family's food requirements, Mrs. Hendrickson recommends three easy-to-get booklets: "Food and Nutrition," (obtainable from the Red Cross for 30 cents.), "Food for the Family with Young Children", and "Food for Two" (both available from the United States Department of Agriculture).

"If you have those three booklets, you'll have plenty of information to keep you from getting off the beam nutritionally when you're cutting down on certain foods," says Mrs Hendrickson.

As to specific food and money-saving ideas, here are two of many she—or other women at the meetings—have suggested:

Meat drippings can be used in shortening bread—even in cake—if you clarify them first. To 3 pounds of drippings, add 1 pint of water, 1 apple and 1 potato cut in small pieces. Heat through till mixture bubbles. Remove from fire and add 1 cup cold water. Let mixture stand till clear fat congeals, then skim it off.

Use potatoes as an extender in stuffing and in dumplings, both the kind served with meat and the dessert type.

Sunday's Peace Plate

Instead of the usual Sunday roast, the Peace Plate suggested for tomorrow by Citizens Food Committee includes Sliced Tongue with barbecue sauce. The menu:

Sliced Tongue with Barbecue Sauce
Sweet Potatoes Creamed Onions
Tossed Green Salad
Quick Fruit Duff or Ice Cream

SLICED TONGUE WITH BARBECUE SAUCE

Wash a 4- to 5-pound smoked tongue well, and arrange in deep kettle; cover completely with cold water, cover, and bring to a boil. Remove any scum from surface, then reduce heat and simmer about 3½-4 hours (about 50 minutes per pound), or until a fork pierces it easily. Then remove, pull off skin carefully, and trim off thick end where small bones are apparent. Serve, sliced, hot or cold with barbecue sauce. Serves six, with leftovers.

BARBECUE SAUCE

1/3 cup minced onion
3 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine
1/3 cup vinegar or lemon juice
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 cup catchup
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1/2 cup water
2 tablespoons Worcestershire Sauce (optional)
1/8 teaspoon salt

Cook onion in butter until tender. Add remaining ingredients and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Makes two cups.

League of Women Voters Backs Stopgap Relief for Europe

By Genevieve Reynolds

The National League of Women Voters will throw its strength behind the enactment of a stopgap aid program to Europe. At the same time the organization will advocate postponement of tax reduction until strong inflationary pressures have been slackened. These are the decisions made Thursday by the national board of the league at its week-long session here in the Statler Hotel.

In announcing the league's stand, Miss Anna Lord Strauss, national president, said, "the league's board believes that available facts indicate that the United States can furnish a considerable program of reconstruction aid to Europe without injuring its own economy. "We believe that such a program is the only constructive way to prevent European collapse."

She pointed out that the League realizes the program is no panacea, but thinks it offers valid hope of restoring stability. "Adequate funds to do the job must be voted," she emphasized, "if the program is to be one of recovery and not just relief."

Board members further agreed that Federal Government expenditures must be restricted to help meet the cost of such a program for Europe; that when inflationary dangers are passed is the time to reduce taxes, according to Miss Strauss.

Although the European recovery program will not be carried out through the United Nations, the league board requested that United Nations agencies be used whereever possible

Negro Women's National Group Commends Civil Rights Report

The National Council of Negro Women yesterday passed a resolution of thanks to President Truman for initiating the Civil Rights Committee report and commended the committee on the excellent way it carried out the Chief Executive's instructions.

Action was taken at the council's concluding session of its twelfth annual convention held in the Department of Labor Auditorium. Letters of appreciation will be sent to the President.

A portion of the motion called upon the council's members to organize forums to study the Civil Rights report and to disseminate its contents to all groups. Also, council members were urged to circulate a petition to be sent to the President calling for immediate implementation of the findings of the Civil Rights Report.

Other resolutions indorsed included one expressing the council's strong opposition to Universal Military Training and another giving full support of passage of FEPC bills in municipal, State and Federal Legislatures.

At the afternoon business meeting two Washington women were named to national posts. Dr. Mary Church Terrell was elected historian and Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee, treasurer. Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder and president of the council, was not up for reelection.

Six vice presidents voted in were Miss Ruth Scott of Philadelphia, Mrs. M. S. Coarey of Baltimore, Dr. Beulah Winston of South Carolina, Miss Arenina C. Mallory of Lexington, Miss.; Mrs. Eleanor Curtis Dailey of Chicago and Mrs. Sue Bailey Thurman of San Francisco.

Other officers elected include Mrs. Mame Mason Higgins of Chicago, recording secretary; Mrs. Rosa L. Blocker of New York City, parliamentarian; Mrs. Edith Sampson Clayton, chairman of the executive board.

In Bridal Procession

Miss Eleanor Solomon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Solomon, this city, was married in Beth Sholom Synagogue on November 8 to Leo Fischer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Fischer, also of Washington. Rabbi Henry Segel officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with seed pearls and featured by bustle and train. Her veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and she carried white orchids.

The bride's 10 attendants were Mrs. Hal Solomon and Mrs. Stanley Gimble, matrons of honor, wearing green and rust crepe and carrying red and pink roses, respectively; Miss Ethel Rosenbloom, maid of honor, costumed in gold crepe with bouquet of talisman roses; Mrs. Herbert Diamond, Mrs. Henry Ricklis, Miss Sylvia Borek, Miss Anita Buchalter and Miss Anne Torshinsky, bridesmaids, gowned in blue and carrying pink bouquets; Miss Sandra Solomon, junior bridesmaid, also in blue with an old-fashioned bouquet centered with a lighted candle, and Susan Hollander, flower girl.

Sheldon Fischer served his brother as best man and ushers were Hal Solomon, Stanley Gimble, Phillip Rosenbloom, Larry Pafer, and Herbert Diamond. Martin Kovalsky was junior usher and Paul Kovalsky acted as ringbearer.

Craigie—Claussen

In Christ Lutheran Church on November 9, Miss Clarita A. Claussen was married to Stanton Collins Craigie, with the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel officiating. The bride is the daughter of August E. Claussen of Birmingham, Ala., and the late Mrs. Claussen, and the bridegroom is the son of the late Ernest Percy Craigie of London, England, and the late Mrs. Florence Collins Craigie of Syracuse, N. Y.

Escorted by Daniel B. Leahy, the bride was gowned in ivory satin with finger-tip veil attached to a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a prayerbook with gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant, Miss Zoe Lyon, wore a gown of light blue satin with bouquet of pink and blue flowers. Harano Childs acted as best man and ushers were H. Lee Chisholm, John C. Paisley and William Harvest.

After a wedding supper at The Highlands, Mr. and Mrs. Craigie left on a wedding trip to Miami Beach, Fla., after which they will make their home in Washington.

Hagerstown Flooring Firm Sues Union

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—The Colonial Hardwood Flooring Co., of Hagerstown, today had on file in Federal Court a $90,000 damage suit against the United Furniture Workers of America, CIO, and its Local 472.

The suit was filed under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Counsel for the firm said it had a labor agreement with the union ending October 15, but that the union gave advance notice August 13 it would terminate the contract. The complaint alleged an illegal strike was called October 3 and was still continuing.

One count of the suit claimed $40,000 damages because of the strike's effect on the company's business, and an additional $5000 for deterioration of lumber allegedly left unstored because of threats of violence upon employes.

Another count claimed $45,000 because of alleged efforts to persuade two other Hagerstown concerns not to process goods bought or manufactured by the flooring company.

The National Labor Relations Board meanwhile was considering two complaints charging the union local with violating the Taft-Hartley law. The firm charged the local with unfair labor practices, and the Danzer Metal Works of Hagerstown charged the union with participating in a secondary boycott.

Approximately 25 workers crossed picket lines at the plant today, and one picket was held in $500 bond for Circuit Court action on a charge of assaulting a nonstriking worker.

President William A. Danzer reopened the plant yesterday, calling back 50 of the 100-odd workers, at wage increases of 5 and 10 cents hourly. He said he would call back the remaining 50 in about 10 days.

Held for court action was Donald R. Carr, 24, charged with assault on Thurman West, 30. He was arraigned before Magistrate M. V. B. Bostetter.

Patrick DHIA Herd Leader In Va. Output

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—An average butterfat production of 34.1 pounds per cow gave the Patrick County Dairy Herd Improvement Association first place among Virginia's DHIAs for September, the State Dairymen's Association reported today.

The Patrick group is supervised by J. B. Gunter.

In its monthly DHIA summary, the association listed the Charlotte group, supervised by R. H. Hundley, jr., as first among the State's 47 DHIAs in milk production with an average per cow of 780 pounds.

High individual herd in butterfat production was that of C. R. Hope & Son in the Loudoun County No. 1 DHIA. Hope's 32 registered Holsteins averaged 51.2 pounds per cow for the month, the report showed.

The C. C. Lynn herd of 16 grade Holsteins in the Prince William DHIA ranked second in milk production with a 1226-pound average.

Meanwhile, Virginia milk cows, which produced 1,413,000,000 pounds of milk during the first nine months of this year, will set a new State record if their output continues unabated through December, Secretary R. G. Connelly of the association reported.

The nine-month figure was approximately 0.6 per cent above that for the same period of 1946, Connelly said.

Connelly said the State's estimate 440,000 milk cows produced an average per animal of 13.9 pounds of milk daily during September to exceed the 1946 September average by 9 per cent and establish a new State record.

The estimate that there are about 440,000 milk cows in the State this year was 4000 above the 1946 figure, he stated.

Four States In Livestock Competitions

Timonium, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—College livestock judging teams from eight schools, and 4-H clubbers from four States open the Eastern National Livestock Show at the Maryland State Fair Grounds here tomorrow.

County teams which won Statewide contests in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and New York will vie for $250 in prizes in the 4-H contest, with the winning team pulling down $100.

Teams made up of juniors and seniors in the animal husbandry departments at Maryland, Cornell, Clemson, Virginia Polytech, North Carolina State, West Virginia and Wisconsin are entered in the collegiate competitions.

A Talbot County team, coached by County Agricultural Agent R. S. Brown, will represent Maryland in the 4-H contest.

Loudoun Countains, coached by W. H. Cockerill, county agent at Leesburg, will carry Virginia's banner. The team includes Edwin Arnold, Tommy Fleming, Jackie Arnold and Frank Keesling.

The team representing West Virginia is from Harrison County.

The collegians will grade entries in 1 classes of beef cattle, draft horses, sheep and swine.

James B. Outhouse, coach of the Maryland team, said he would pick the university's five-man entry just before the contest starts Saturday. In the running are O'Dell G. Daniel of Ratcliff, Ark.; Whitney B. McCrea of Riverdale, Gilbert J. Plumer of Thurmont, Gerald T. Warwick of College Park, Huber C. Tucker of Arlington, Va.; J. McGuire Mattingly of Leonardtown, and Robert K. Bechtold of Laurel.

Cambridge Fire Cost Put At $150,000

Cambridge, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Firemen today hosed down the last embers of a blaze which last night wrecked the Pilgrim Holiness Church, a warehouse, a wholesale grocery, a machine shop and three small sheds, causing damage estimated at $100,000 to $150,000.

The Harvey Wilson beer storage warehouse, containing 1800 cases, was in ruins.

The Wilson Abbott Machine Shop and the J. E. Andrews wholesale grocery store were heavily damaged.

The church was a blackened shell and the Rev. B. H. Lucas, pastor, said the one-story frame structure would have to be rebuilt.

C. K. Dill, owner of the sheds, said the blaze started in the machine shop, then spread to the church and adjoining buildings.

Newsmen Taken on Cruise To See Md. Oyster Fishing

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Dredging and tonging operations in Chesapeake Bay oyster beds were observed today by 20 tidewater area newspapermen, who began an inspection tour aboard the State ship Potomac.

The trip was made at the invitation of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission to familiarize the newsmen with problems of the oyster industry.

On the schedule in the morning was a tour of the Broad Creek dredging area on the Kent Island shore, followed by a visit to Anne Arundel County waters on the western shore for demonstration of tonging.

Lectures were delivered by commission experts aboard the Potomac. These were illustrated with lantern slides by State Shellfish Culturist Ralph C. Hammer.

The group stayed tonight at Solomons.

The newsmen will visit private oyster plantations in the Patuxent River tomorrow. General discussion of oystering problems will take place with the assistance of officials of the Department of Research and Education.

President Relents On Eggnog at Yule

President Truman yesterday granted America a special dispensation permitting eggnog on Christmas.

At his press conference, a newsman reminded the President that the holiday fell on a Thursday. If that day, like all other Thursdays, was to be eggless, the reporter asked, would the Nation have to go eggnogless.

His voice betraying his horror of such a prospect, Mr. Truman said he thought that we have to have eggnogs for Christmas.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

TODAY'S RADIO HIGHLIGHTS

Carl Green's popular "Children's Hour" over WQQW is being moved to Saturday mornings at 9 o'clock today from its former Sunday morning spot in response to sad letters from ministers admitting that the program was depleting the Sunday School ranks. Today's program includes "The Story of Horace, a Bear Who Ate Everybody Up" and "Captain Dow and the Hole in the Doughnut."

The Metropolitan Opera radio season begins this afternoon at 2 o'clock over WMAL-ABC, with Puccini's "La Tosca" sung by Elen Dosia, Lawrence Tibbett and Jan Peerce. Guests on the opera quiz and opera news interludes are Critics Olin Downes, Sigmund Spaeth, Robert Bagar and Robert Lawrence, Actor James Mason and Singer Dorothy Kirsten.

Other highlights:

"Twelve Dancing Princesses" is dramatized by youngsters for youngsters. WTOP—11:05 a. m.

Look Kids—This Man Is Also Against Homework

Dr. Walter E. Hager, president of Wilson Teachers College, should be a very popular guy with the younger readers of this column.

Dr. Hager is opposed to the principle of homework for schoolchildren, and thinks that teachers should assign as little as possible.

He points out that the modern child has little time left for homework after he has devoted portions of his "leisure" hours to music lessons, athletics, dramatics, hobbies, religious training, chores around the house, Boy and Girl Scout activities, and a few minutes in the evening for Dad.

"Even an adult considers 40 hours of regimented time a full week's work," said Dr. Hager as he addressed the Kimball P.-T. A. meeting Thursday night. "We should expect less of our children—not more."

After the meeting, Teacher Gladys Bartlett slyly asked me whether I'd heard about the little boy who was sent to the grocery store by his mother.

After pondering over his shopping list for a bit, the lad exclaimed:

"Gee, Ma—I can't even read readin' very good yet, let alone writin'."

PERSONAL NOTES

Harry B. Creely, 5360 MacArthur blvd., and George A. Flynn, 1309 Rhode Island ave. nw.: Thanks for the tips, but I still can't trace down the origin of the epigram, "Today is the tomorrow you worried about yesterday, and it didn't happen—did it?"

OBVIOUSLY

A. J. Levine of 2803 Terrace rd. se. sends me a pamphlet put out by Group Hospitalization, Inc. It says:

"One person entered a hospital every two seconds last year."

Which moves District Liner Levine to comment:

"Sounds like a mighty sick person. Hope he's feeling better this year."

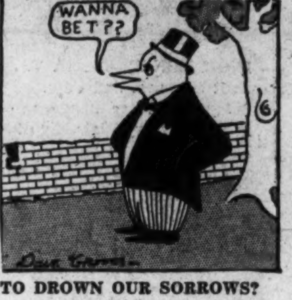
MISCELLANY

The Capital City Cocker Club is touring the various Boys Clubs with a dog show designed to teach the boys and dogs how to get along with each other . . . Two District Liners have suggestions for Earl Mosburg, who is interested in rocket development. Maj. Charles S. Coulter of 4212 37th st. nw. says Earl can get all the information he needs from Worcester Polytechnic Institute, in Worcester, Mass. M. B. d'A. of the Dodge Hotel suggests Librairie Garneau, Rue Buade, Quebec, P. Q., Canada . . . After the Kool cigarette penguin did his transcribed sales pitch the other night, a lady called WRC and complained bitterly that the station was trying to flimflam the public. "Everybody with an ounce of brains," she said, "knows that penguins don't talk." Weebee says:



TO DROWN OUR SORROWS?

The morning mail brings a routine notification regarding the next luncheon meeting of the Ohio State Alumni Club.

It will be held this upcoming Wednesday, from noon to 1:30 p. m., at the Hotel Lafayette. The featured speaker will be old grad Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, who distinguished himself in the Pacific fighting as commander of the Thirty-seventh Division.

In addition to this formal notification, I detect a note of sadness in the postscript.

It reveals that the Michigan Alumni Club invites all Ohio Staters to listen to a broadcast of the traditional Ohio State-Michigan football game at the Burlington Hotel on November 22. And it adds somewhat wistfully:

"Refreshments will be available, and we Ohio Staters will probably need them."

WE'RE "IN DUTCH" AGAIN

Lee Harrigan wants to know what "sheese" means.

She says that one of the clews in a recent crossword puzzle was "Dutch sheese."

Dutch is a strange language, Lee. Maybe "sheese" is the plural of "shoe."

WHO'S ON FIRST?

The strange names sometimes given to moving pictures have their brighter side.

As a patron was leaving the Metropolitan Theater earlier this week, he asked Manager John Marcon:

"What's your next attraction here?"

"Heaven Only Knows," replied Marcon.

The customer walked out shaking his head, and mumbling something about the inefficiency of show people. Marcon says wistfully:

"I could have gone on to try to explain that 'Heaven Only Knows' is the name of the picture, but what's the use? We'd have wound up sounding like Abbott and Costello."

THE WASHINGTON POST
Saturday, November 15, 1947

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur have been suffering the customary parental anxiety about the instilling into their daughter, Mary, a schooling in defenses against men who make passes. Mary, who has enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Art, is 17 now and most attractive. . . . She recently had a date with a husky, aggressive Princeton student. He had a few drinks and during the taxi ride home he made a pass. She remembered the defenses her parents had taught her, but then adopted one of her own, a unique one which broke up the play. She merely chewed the special gum she always carries and blew a large bubble.

When Joe DiMaggio, Eddy Duchin and Toots Shor went to Hot Springs, they received hot-pack treatments where they needed them most. DiMaggio had the hot-packs placed on his ailing shoulder, the overweight Shor had them on his stomach, and Duchin had them on his sore fingers . . . While they were being treated another man entered the room and had a hot-pack placed on his fingers . . . "Are you a pianist, too?" Duchin asked him . . . "No, I'm not a pianist," said the man. "I'm a pickpocket."

In General Patton's personal war story, "War as I Knew It," it was revealed that when he was a member of General Pershing's staff he once was assigned to the then Prince of Wales, and introduced the prince to a game he never had played before—craps.

Maxwell Bodenheim, the poet, will make his annual public appearance at the Greenwich Village artists ball at the Irving Plaza November 14.

Sir Laurence Olivier, who is producing, directing and starring in the film version of "Hamlet," also played the role of the ghost. After he saws the rushes, Olivier eliminated himself as the ghost and hired another actor to play the role. "I didn't play the ghost well enough," said Olivier. "Maybe it just goes to show that I hate getting a part which is second fiddle, even to myself."

Mike Romanoff saw an array of blonde actresses and models vying with each other for the exclusive attention of the visiting Maharajah of Cooch-Behar. Romanoff saw the contest start first at Ciro's in Hollywood and continue to El Morocco in New York. The Maharajah is not as wealthy as Maharajahs are reputed to be. His annual income, in fact, is less than that of any doorman at the Stork Club, or of Carino, guardian of the rope and table designator at El Morocco . . . "Why do those girls flock around the Maharajah?" Mike Romanoff was asked . . . "People always are hungry for distinction," Prince Mike explained. "That hunger is so intense that it even once was directed toward me."

Tax Study Report Held Slanted

By Drew Pearson

Magill

Here is the inside story of what happened. Leading members of Knutson's self-appointed Tax Study Committee are Roswell Magill, prominent Wall Street tax attorney; J. Cheever Cowdin, who lists more big corporate directorates after his name than most people in "Who's Who," and John W. Hanes, who is pretty close to Cowdin as a baron of big business.

The committee report, written by Magill, was printed at the taxpayers' expense on the finest paper money can buy. Its release was also carefully engineered so it would get the headlines. Meanwhile the papers barely mentioned the fact that Matthew Woll, American Federation of Labor official, had vigorously dissented.

Significantly, though Woll is a member of the same tax committee, his dissenting report was printed on ordinary paper and made to look as unimportant as possible. Furthermore, the two reports were not issued together.

This caused an inquiry from Congressman Aime J. Forand (D., R. I.).

"Why is it," he asked Magill, "that the majority and minority reports are not printed together, as is the usual custom?" Magill replied that he had not known until October 31 that a minority report was going to be filed. The Wall Street lawyer, however, was not telling exactly the truth. Actually he knew this on October 21.

Here's what happened:

At the final meeting of the tax-study group October 21, Magill was informed by Arthur Elder, Woll's alternate on the committee, that Woll was unequivocally opposed to the Wall Street-slanted tax report and would file a minority report of his own.

Knutson Sees Woll

Immediately, Congressman Knutson, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, tried to persuade Woll to change his mind. He asked him to talk to Magill. Finally, on October 29, still nearly a week before the tax report was released, AFL Leader Woll agreed to talk to Wall Street Lawyer Magill.

The meeting got nowhere. Woll had already written his minority report and handed it to Magill to be printed. This caused Magill to hit the ceiling. He was so angry when he failed to persuade Woll to keep silent that he refused to print the AFL leader's minority report at all.

Furthermore, he then maneuvered to discredit the Woll report.

Wall Street Maneuvering

Magill is a shrewd past master at the art of getting Wall Street's tax viewpoint before the public. So, after it was decided to give the tax reports to the press, Magill carefully inserted a new sentence into his own report. It was a sentence filled with sweet platitudes for low-income taxpayers, but it actually meant nothing. It was also calculated to get the headlines.

And when Magill called his press conference, he read the newsmen only this added sentence: "We recommend a reduction in individual income-tax rates for all, with due regard for the cost of living of those in the lower-income groups, and for the needs of the balance of economy."

Furthermore, Magill gave newsmen permission to release that sentence immediately. This was clever strategy, for Magill knew that the newsmen could not violate the release date on the dissenting tax report issued by AFL Leader Matt Woll.

Result: First newspaper dispatches blared forth the welcome news that Magill's committee favored substantial tax reduction for low-income groups.

Not until long after Magill's carefully timed publicity had hit the front pages did anyone wake up to the fact that Magill and his Wall Street advisers had concocted tax recommendations riddled with loopholes all in favor of people making more than $5000.

For instance, cleverly concealed in the recommendation to Congress is the fact that surtax rates at the top be reduced by 38 per cent, while at the bottom rates would be reduced only 2 per cent. That is the kind of "reduction in individual income-tax rates for all" so cleverly concocted by Wall Street's able tax attorney, Roswell Magill.
